Doing It Well.
Olympic Games.
A Lopsided League.
News for Your Baby.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, SAN SIMEON, Cal., Aug. 7.

IF YOU ENTER California by one of the northern gates, through Oakland, and if correct management of land interests you, call on Roy Pike at his fruit ranch at Vernalis, in the San Joaquin valley, on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

MR. PIKE has one idea, to grow everything as good, and as big, as it can be grown, but always sacrificing size to quality.

He is the grower of the peaches mentioned here recently, evenly matched in size, magnificent in color, each about as big as an old fashioned outsize croquet ball.

Mr. Pike also grows turkeys, as a fruit ranch by-product, and neighbors say you must select your Pike turkey cautiously. You might get one too big to go through the front door. To do a thing as well as it can be done is to deserve honor. Roy Pike deserves it.

ALL INTEREST here is centered on the Olympic Games, triumphs of the various nations, and especially the achievements of American athletes.

These contests remind you that there are many kinds of Americans.

Young men of African blood show the whites, of all countries, how to run fast. Native swimmers from Hawaii represented the "American hope." But when the finals of the men's 100-meter free style swim were over today, the Japanese flag went to the top of the victory pole.

Yashai Miyazaki, a sixteen-year-old youth born farther East than Hawaii, won, and another Japanese, Takahashi, was second.

TWO LITTLE American girls, Jean Shiley and Babe Didrikson, led the girls' high-jumping, both breaking world and Olympic records.

To comfort American girls that cannot win Olympic events, there is always the thought that the best prizes are not won by high jumping or throwing the javelin.

Helen, who "launched a thousand ships," never launched a javelin, or jumped five feet six; but she had an interesting career.

THE REAL Olympic event went yesterday to an American, but he was a South American, Zabala, of the Argentine Republic.

He won the Marathon, running 26 miles and 385 yards in 2 hours, 31 minutes and 36 seconds. That is a new Olympic record, and all North Americans will rejoice with Argentina in her victory.

Tell your little boy how the brave Greek ran with the news all the way from Marathon, and read to your little girl Byron's fine lines "where the mountains look on Marathon, and Mara-looks upon the sea," etc.

THE IMPORTANT world news, yet to have official confirmation, announced the retirement of Germany, Italy and Japan from the League of Nations. That would leave in the League only two great nations of Europe; England and France.

This is not our affair, for we are blessedly CUT and shall never be pushed into the League.

But with the three nations out of the "Big Five," the League will feel like a centipede minus seventy-two legs.

Europe will find itself preparing for war, as in 1914, with no central gathering place, even, for talking about peace.

JAPAN FEELS that the League interferes in exclusively Asiatic matters. Germany feels that she has been badly treated.

Italy resents too much advice, and being classed as a child. Fundamentally, by the two big nations that really ARE the League. If so, Italy and Germany get out that will begin a new European chapter.

ELISABETH SHIRLEY ENOCHS says this column owes an apology to the Labor Department of the United States because it did not mention that department's "Children's Bureau" in commenting on the case of a mother who killed herself and her sickly infant because she could not get help for the child.

MRS. ENOCHS, associate editor of the government bulletin, "Infant Care," believes that this bulletin should have been mentioned for the benefit of mothers in distress, and she is right. The difficulty is that the writer didn't know about it.

THE BULLETIN of infant care has a wider publication than any other government bulletin, over 5,700,000 copies of it having been distributed free.

The bulletin is distributed free, but sometimes when the free supply is exhausted it is necessary to send ten cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. One million copies of it have been sold in addition to the 5,700,000 copies given away. Other popular publications of the Labor Department Children's Bureau that the citizens will want to know about are Prenatal Care, The Child from One to Six, Child Management, and Are You Training Your Child to Be Happy?

Nearly 11,000,000 copies of these pamphlets have been distributed free.

Camera-Startled!

GUY VOLPE LEAVING THE COUNTY MORGUE

Guy Volpe, pictured as with a heavy coat pocket he left the county morgue today after claiming the personal effects—diamonds, watches and other valuables—found on the bodies of his three slain brothers. He ducked as cameras clicked, then pleasantly faced the cameras, thankfully not machine guns. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

LIBBY HOLMAN ON WAY TO SURRENDER FOR TRIAL

CAMERAS GUNS TO GUY VOLPE

For a brief minute today Guy Volpe appeared certain that he was about to join his departed brethren, the murdered Johnny, Arthur and Jim.

Volpe had just left the morgue and as he stepped into Ross street three photographers popped out from a billboard, raised their mysterious-looking camera boxes and clicked away as industriously as a trigger man rattles off a machine gun.

Guy seemed to think they were machine guns, for he ducked behind his attorney, Ira Hurwick. After he regained his composure he appeared so relieved that the photographers had no trouble.

Volpe visited the morgue to claim valuables worn by his brothers when they were murdered in Wylie avenue 10 days ago.

The murderers have not been caught. Today, in Central Police Court, Joseph Picci, of Wilmerding, former chauffeur for Jim Volpe, was held for further investigation, although he has denied witnessing the massacre.

Bank Holdup Balked By Trap Door Ruse

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Aug. 8.—Confronted with a revolver when he looked up at a strange young man who sought to sell him a fountain pen this morning, Walter R. Moomaw, cashier of the Exchange State Bank at Stone Creek, dropped into the basement through a trap door.

Moomaw, who kept the pen, reappeared as the bandit fled empty-handed with two companions in an automobile.

Physicians said this morning the doctor was considered "still quite ill."

POOR'S RATIONS CUT, PERIL SEEN

BULLETIN.

A fund of $260,000 in custody of the Poor Board was made available for relief work in Allegheny County at a joint meeting of the directors of the board and the County Commissioners this afternoon. Relief work in the county, exclusive of the city, is costing approximately $60,000 weekly. Meanwhile issuance of $800,000 bonds for relief purposes was deferred.

The first half-ration food orders were issued here today, at the same time that nutrition experts were declaring that health maintenance was impossible on such diet.

It is expected that the County Poor Board—handling relief outside the city—will try to raise funds by borrowing and sale of bonds.

The half ration, while a hardship, will be softened for about two-thirds of the distressed families dependent upon curtailed relief by harvests of 20,000 thrift gardens, according to Maj. Phillip

STOCKS UP ON FURIOUS BUYING

Commodity Markets Also Take Part In Upswing

Stocks rushed upward in another surge of buying today, but ran into a heavy profit-taking in the last hour which clipped most of the earlier gains off the leaders' quoations.

Volume of trading was the largest in months, running at a rate of around 5,000,000 shares as the market went into the final hour.

Commodities supported the stock market with spectacular gains, notably cotton. This staple bulged $5 a bale when the government report showed a drastic shrinkage in this season's crop estimate. Wheat ran up for a gain of 1⅝ for September delivery after having shown a little hesitation at the start.

Most of the key stocks on the exchange recorded new highs for the movement before they met the wave of realizing sales which turned them downward. Steel had worked up to around 45 and Telephone had reached 114.

The early advance again confounded the bears, who had been expecting a break in prices at the opening. Over 700,000 shares poured into the market in the first half hour, but most of it was taken on a rising price trend. Later the list backed and filled, but continued to make headway until the last hour.

Lancaster Witness Flies With Pangborn

DUAL LOVE BARED BY AVIATRIX

Mrs. Keith-Miller Sobs On Stand; Lancaster Will Testify

By LARRY SMITS
International News Service.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller declared from the witness stand today that she would "die for Capt. William N. Lancaster."

State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne barked:

"Would you lie for him?"

The woman, who had admitted she was doing her best to save the British flier and war hero from the electric chair in his trial for the murder of Haden Clarke, her fiance, snapped back:

"No."

"Did you love Haden Clarke?"

"I did."

DECLARES LOVE KILLED

"Do you still love him?"

"No. My love for Haden Clarke has been killed. I've been disillusioned. He lied to me about his age, about having a university degree and other things."

"Do you love Capt. Lancaster?"

"No."

"Did you ever?"

"Yes."

"Up to what time?"

"Until two years ago. I am still intensely fond of him."

AVIATRIX ANGERED

The ire of the diminutive aviatrix was rising under the barbed questions of the prosecutor. Her answers came in sharp, staccato fashion. Her eyes were flashing as he continued:

"If you were not in love with him, were you not betraying him in every letter and were you not a traitor to him in every message when you sent him 'all your love?'"

Her voice rising, Mrs. Keith-Miller replied:

"I don't believe you understand my attitude toward Capt. Lancaster.

"We've been through a lot together. We were pals, companions. What I've had was his and what he had was mine. We trusted each other. We've been friends."

TEARS FOLLOW RAGE

The aviatrix burst into tears, the first time she has given way to her emotions during the arduous questioning to which she has been put repeatedly during the trial.

When the aviatrix again burst into tears outside the courtroom during a recess, Capt. Lancaster, highly perturbed, motioned to newspapermen to come to him. He was interrupted, however, by James A. Carson, chief defense counsel, who rushed up and shouted:

"Bill, keep your mouth shut."

SONGSTRESS TO ASK BAIL

Widow of Reynolds to Appear Before Carolina Judge

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, Broadway song star, will arrive in Wentworth, N. C., late today and surrender to authorities on a charge of murdering her young husband, Smith Reynolds.

Counsel for Mrs. Reynolds, in making this official announcement, said that after her surrender Mrs. Reynolds would seek a writ of habeas corpus to secure her freedom under bail.

The statement, issued by Benet Polikoff and William Graves, local attorneys for Mrs. Reynolds, was authorized by Arthur Holman, father of Libby, who was present during the announcement to newspapermen.

STATEMENT ISSUED

The statement read as follows:

"Mrs. Reynolds will arrive in Wentworth, N. C., this afternoon at 3 o'clock to surrender to Sheriff Transout Scott or some other North Carolina official.

"A habeas Corpus writ will immediately be argued out before Judge A. M. Stack, presiding in County Court there."

While the attorneys would not reveal the route to be taken by Mrs. Reynolds, International News Service learned that Mrs. Reynolds will arrive at a nearby town by train where she will be taken over to Wentworth by Sheriff Scott.

The news that Libby was definitely due at a certain place was held up for local distribution to prevent a large crowd gathering at Wentworth.

Wentworth is 40 miles away from Winston-Salem and a hamlet of only a few hundred persons in Rockingham County.

The lawyers of Mrs. Reynolds said they were uninformed at present as to what Mrs. Reynolds planned to do in the event that she obtained her freedom on bail from Judge Stack.

Counsel said there was no question under North Carolina law

WIFE ASSISTS ROOSEVELT

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the Democratic presidential nominee, took a definite part today in the campaign to elect her husband to the White House when she went before a gathering of party leaders from various sections of the country and asked them what could be done that would most help the women's movement in their respective states.

Mrs. Roosevelt has temporarily taken charge of the women's bureau of the Democratic party in the absence of Miss Mary W. Dewson, who is in Maine on a vacation.

The party leaders before whom Mrs. Roosevelt appeared today came from 17 states in response to a call from James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, who presided at the conclave. They included Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh.

Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world, who is in much demand over the country as a speaker, visited Farley's headquarters and conferred with Robert Jackson, head of the speakers' bureau.

PINCHOT TO ASK UTILITIES QUIZ

HARRISBURG, Aug. 8.—Gov. Pinchot is expected to ask the special session of the Legislature, through a committee of the Senate, for a complete investigation of the activities of public utilities in their relation with public officials in the past 10 years.

When W. D. B. Ainey resigned, a Senate committee named to try him was dismissed, and the majority leadership in the Senate set itself against further action.

If the Governor decides to press for a probe, he is expected to carry his demand personally before the Senate this week.

Kills Self as Actress Spurns Love Plea

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—A love tragedy involving Alice Cocea, one of France's stage and screen favorites, and a young explorer who committed suicide before her eyes in a canoe in full view of fashionable crowds on the beach, shocked the Cote d'Azur today. Police blamed unrequited love.

The victim was Lieut. Victor Point, 30, an officer of the French navy and second in command of Georges Marie Haardt's recent expedition into the Gobi Desert.

Mlle. Cocea, daughter of a Rumanian colonel and who was recently divorced from the Duke de la Rochefoucault, was abroard her small yacht a short distance offshore.

Point set off from the beach in a canoe. When he had pulled alongside the yacht he stood up and began a conversation with Mlle. Cocea, who was standing at the rail with a group of friends.

Persons on the beach saw Lieut. Point make what appeared to be an impassioned plea to the actress. But whatever his argument was, Mlle Cocea remained unmoved.

Lieut. Point suddenly sat down in the canoe and started to paddle back to shore. Half way to the beach, he stood up, and turning about to face the actress, placed a pistol to his head and fired.

Mlle. Cocea shrieked. Sobbing and hysterical, she was brought ashore in a small boat.

The body was not recovered for several hours. When at last it was dragged up on the beach, the actress threw herself upon it, moaning and kissing the white face.

Hoover Gets Big Laugh Out of Bees' Attack

LURAY, Va., Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Even the depression failed to lessen the robustness of the laugh that President Hoover carried away from Camp Rapidan this morning.

Lawrence Richey, his secretary of long standing, and Capt. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, were butts of the situation that kept the executive and all of his guests rocking with laughter over the week-end.

As has been the practice on various week-ends during the last summer, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover took their two dogs along with them Pat, the big German shepherd, and Weejie, the Norwegian elk hound were playing Sunday morning and darted into a clump of laurel.

Suddenly the camp party was startled by piercing yelps and Pat dashed madly out of the underbrush and up the road, his tail between his legs. A split second behind him was Weejie.

Richey and Dr. Boone, being true men of the hour, rushed to the scene. But in the undergrowth they smacked squarely into a bees' nest.

Richey and Dr. Boone promptly changed their tactics and joined the general retreat.

After the pair finally made their way back to camp, President Hoover asked:

"What happens when a bee sits down and pushes?"

COOLIDGE DECLINES TO ATTEND HOOVER'S NOTIFICATION

EX-PRESIDENT'S REFUSAL IRKS G.O.P. CHIEFS

Mellon Among Those Due at Ceremonies On Thursday

By ROBERT BARRY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—One man in the United States intends to "keep cool with Coolidge" while the Republican national campaign is being thrown into high gear here Thursday.

He is none other than the former President himself.

President Hoover was more than just a bit eager to have his predecessor on the platform at the notification exercises, which are to be converted into an old-fashioned Republican shindig.

Coolidge declined.

NOT TEMPTED

The chance to sleep in a White House bed did not tempt him. A presidential invitation was no command.

Numerous other party notables are going to be present.

The great and near great for miles around are coming.

There is to be a "tea party" on the White House grounds with food and Marine Band music.

In the evening a "master of ceremonies" will introduce the celebrities to the radio audience. James Francis Burke, master showman, arrives today for the advance ballyhooing.

Although it is a purely domestic political affair the foreign diplomats — those who haven't gone to Europe—have been invited.

So, too, members of the Supreme Court, the cabinet, senators and congressmen. Republicans who are only big frogs in little state ponds will fraternize with national notables.

The President will stand between massed clusters of the flags of the 48 states. Behind him will be the national colors and his own official flag.

ALICE TO ATTEND

Alice Longworth is leaving a comfortable spot on Long Island to represent the Republican Roosevelts. "Dolly" Gann is deferring her departure for Topeka, Kan., to arrange "Brother Charley's" own notification party. Andrew W. Mellon is expected just to show he is not sulking over being shifted from the Treasury to the Court of St. James.

All in all it's going to be everything the Republicans can think of to show they are not downhearted nor dismayed.

If only Coolidge would be there, it would be just about perfect.

Hoover wanted him badly. So badly he sent Everett Sanders, the new Republican chairman, all the way to Plymouth Notch, Vt., to press the invitation. Sanders was the Coolidge White House secretary.

No luck!

NICE ABOUT IT

Coolidge could not be lured from a nice cool spot in the Green Mountains to the soggy asphalt of Pennsylvania avenue. He was nice about it. He meant to do what he could for Hoover later on.

He might write a little message.

The official explanation of Coolidge's refusal to come to Hoover's party was:

"The former president did not wish to steal the show from his successor."

French Dedicate War Zone 'Cemetery'

VERDUN, France, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—The warning that an adequate defense must be established to maintain peace today echoed across the "Cemetery of France," where 400,000 Frenchmen died, and which now is marked by France's greatest war memorial.

The "Cemetery of France," as it was termed by President Albert Le Brun, is the new Ossuary of Douaumont, near here, dedicated yesterday in an impressive ceremony.

Kellogg Plays Host To Senator Borah

ST. PAUL, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—United States Senator W. E. Borah, of Idaho, is the guest of Frank B. Kellogg, judge of the League Court, at the latter's home here.

Senator Borah came here from Rochester, Minn., where he underwent an examination at the Mayo clinic which pronounced him physically fit. He plans to leave tomorrow for his home.

Mathews, of the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

GET $2 A WEEK

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ruth Fisher, nutrition expert of a Pittsburgh welfare agency, declared:

"It is an impossibility for a family of more than two individuals to maintain health on $2 per week for food at Pittsburgh prices."

The new schedule gives $2 per week for a family of five.

Maj. Mathews said he was confident that the present shortage will last but for a week. He laid the virtual lapse of relief funds this week—cause of the half ration order—to an unexpected increase in aid appeal of more than 3,000 families during July. He said:

"We must not forget that these people are not altogether dependent on this $2 per week. There are about 22,000 thrift gardens in Allegheny County among the 30,000-odd families receiving relief from the Emergency Association and Welfare Fund Agencies.

"If we were to use the balance of the partially expended $260,000 appropriated by the city for relief last spring, before passage of the first Talbot bill, the tax rate would go up one-third of a mill next year. The taxpayers, who have given $8,000,000 for relief in the last two two years, would have to pay an added $250,000, next year.

"Allegheny County has been bled almost white."

COUNTY BONDS

While the city was expected to have $800,000 — sufficient to last until about November—from sale of bonds, August 16, the County Commissioners were expected, on advice of the Poor Board, today, to authorize the three weeks of advertising necessary before sale of its $800,000 in bonds. The bonds are part of the $3,000,000 for relief and $2,000,000 for work authorized by the polls, April 26.

A loan of sufficient money to carry the county's end of relief administration until bids on the bonds can be opened seemed likely to be authorized by the County Commissioners in joint session with the Poor Board, today. The Poor Board, with borrowing capacity of $15,000,000 owes but $1,500,000.

John F. Casey, acting chairman of the operating committee of the Emergency Association, asked if his board planned to ask the city to advance the balance of the $260,000 appropriation this week, said:

"The Mayor's Committee on Finance recommended that the city avoid an increase in the deficit which such an appropriation would cause.

"There was nothing said about asking the city for it, at the last meeting of the operating committee."

'SLOW STARVATION'

Mrs. Fisher, in objecting to the cut in rations, said:

"It is an impossibility for a family of more than two individuals to maintain health on $2 per week for food at Pittsburgh prices, even though the greatest economy is practiced. If more than two live on $2 they are not getting the minimum essential and they will eventually pay the price of poor health.

"It is a regrettable fact that Pittsburgh, which has worked so harmoniously and earnestly to maintain the minimum food requirements must now give relief which forces individuals to live on food which leads to slow starvation."

Mrs. Fisher exhibited a minimum diet she had worked out:

"Food for a family of five, two adults, three children, 2, 5 and 8 years of age, for one week at present retail prices, eliminating all meat and eggs. If children are older, more of all will be needed:

"Twenty-eight quarts of milk, 17½ pounds of cereals, 1½ pounds of butter substitute, 2¼ pounds of lard, 2¼ pounds of sugar, 10½ pounds of potatoes, 7 pounds of carrots, 7 pounds of apples, 2¼ pounds of tomatoes (2 cans) and 1 pound of cabbage.

"This diet gives a minimum amount of calories, protein grams, calcium, phosphorus and iron grams as well as vitamins."

Cost of this diet for five persons was set at $3.85.

DRY STRATEGY PARLEY SET

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—The course of organized drys in the presidential campaign may be finally determined at a September session of the prohibition board of strategy, dry leaders said today.

Although individual spokesmen have already attempted to chart a plan of action for their followers, the large organizations have not pledged allegiance to any candidate or party.

The unknown quantity of President Hoover's acceptance speech, to be delivered Thursday night, has proved a serious handicap to the dry leaders in framing a policy that would permit them to consolidate their strength in the national election. Whether Mr. Hoover will give encouragement to the drys or to the wets in his acceptance speech is a matter of conjecture.

One of the President's consultants in the preparation of his speech has been James R. Garfield, who was chairman of the resolutions committee of the Chicago convention. It was Garfield, a nominal dry, who battled successfully for what has been characterized as the "straddle plank."

Angler Lands Bird With Hook and Rod

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 8.—L. C. Walton, restaurateur, experienced a brand new fisherman's thrill on Huntoon Lake when the bait he had cast about 75 feet along the shore was snatched high into the air. Unable to see the freak "fish" but suspecting he had hooked a brand new species, he played his aerial quarry as it circled wildly about his boat. The hook held and he finally brought down a blue heron four feet in height and with a six-foot wing spread. He presented it to the Lansing zoo.

Brazil Pours Troops Into Revolt Zone

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug 8.—(AP.)—The federal government pressed a steady stream of troops into its lines on the northern front today as the fifth week of the Sao Paulo rebellion opened.

Gen. Francisco was attempting to oust the rebels from the Parana territory and the district around Jacarezinho, preparatory to a drive on Sao Paulo itself.

GIRL AIR RECORD HOLDER KILLED

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Miss Mildred Kauffman, 25-year-old Kansas City aviatrix, died here early today from injuries suffered when her monoplane locked wings with another machine at low altitude.

The Kansas City girl, who set a new world record for women by looping the loop 46 times at St. Louis in 1930, was the only one of four persons in the accident who failed to escape without serious injuries.

Before a large Sunday crowd at Fairfax airport, Miss Kauffman's plane and another piloted by Don Moss raced across the field in opposite directions at an altitued of about 75 feet. Both pilots made efforts to avoid a collision. The wings locked and both planes fell together. Physicians said Miss Kauffman's neck was broken.

Moss was uninjured. His passenger, Jack Leftwich, 12, escaped with minor head injuries, as did Russell Shaw, who was riding with the girl pilot.

Girl Dies as Plane Crashes and Burns

SPRINGHILL, Nova Scotia, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Marjorie Horton, 19-year-old Springhill girl, was killed yesterday when a plane piloted by Tomm Carr, of St. John, crashed and burst into flames at North Wallace, near here. Carr was burned slightly when he pulled the girl's body out of the blazing plane.

1,200 More at Work, Textile Strike Ends

HIGHPOINT, N. C., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Highpoint's industrial areas hummed in unison for the first time in nearly a month today as the last of 6,000 textile and hosiery strikers went back to work.

Approximately 1,200 workers at the Adams-Millis full-fashioned hosiery mill and the Highland cotton mill marched back to their posts after a wage settlement was effected Friday between mill owners and the idle workers.

RELIEF TAX BILL DEFEAT SEEN IN HOUSE

Strife in Legislature Expected to Delay Adjournment

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—Embroiled in a controversy over taxes so serious that the relief session of the Legislature may be prolonged beyond this week, the House tonight prepared to vote on occupational and an income tax bills, each designed to raise more than $12,000,000.

Blocs are forming which veteran legislators predicted would bring the defeat of both bills tonight. Whether they pass or are defeated, the House Ways and Means Committee is certain to report a selective sales tax bill, putting an impost of two cents on each package of cigarets and 10 per cent on the cost of soft drinks and cosmetics.

BILL TO BE FOUGHT

This bill also is meeting serious opposition, having lain dormant in committees for weeks. Following the visit of Gov. Pinchot and legislative leaders to Washington last week, where the Reconstruction Finance Corporation refused an emergency loan of $10,000,000 with the explanation that Pennsylvania had done little for itself, leaders planned to get behind the sales tax bill.

It is admitted, however that this Legislature has gotten so out of hand, so beyond the control of any leader, that directing a majority sentiment behind any individual tax measure will require vigorous work.

This confusion of sentiment is what has raised the bugaboo of no adjournment before next week. It is pointed out that the Steedle economy bill, on which Senate, House and the Governor were presumed to have agreed more than two weeks ago, still has failed of ratification. It faces a fight through the refusal of Rep. Grover Talbott, author of a $12,000,000 relief appropriation, and proponent of deeper economies, to sign a conference report. Talbott threatens to fight the bill, now calling for departmental cuts of less than $14,000,000, on the floor of the House, and appears to have some backing.

SHY AT TAXES

Legislative leaders point out that if there has been such difficulty in passing an economy bill, admittedly popular, it will be hard to bring any sudden majority sentiment to bear on any tax proposal, from which members shy in an election year.

A bloc of Philadelphia members today attempted to stir sentiment for an increase of two cents in the gasoline tax as an alternative to the tax on soft drinks. This was meeting stout opposition from rural members.

Other suggestions are that money shall be transferred from the motor fund to a relief fund in the emergency, putting a halt to roadbuilding. This also is unpopular with rural members, who are getting the lion's share of the roads.

The House will meet alone tonight, the Senate remaining in recess until Tuesday.

COYNE SCORES PENSION CUTS

State Senator James J. Coyne, before leaving for Harrisburg today, declared there was no necessity for reducing the pensions of retired policemen and firemen. He said:

"The proposed reduction of pensions for retired policemen and firemen, seems to me to be as unfair to the citizens of Pittsburgh as it is to the policemen and firemen.

"The citizens lose when a man still in his prime, who went on the force in his twenties, is forced to retire at a time when his matured experience best equips him to give commendable service.

"The unfairness to the men is the arbitrary taking of a considerable part of the income, due him after a term of honorable service, to provide a living in their later years."

CHAPIN PLEASED AT TRADE GAIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Gratification at the "unmistakably better tone that now prevails in our industries and marts of trade," was expressed today by Roy D. Chapin as he was sworn in as Secretary of Commerce.

The Detroit automobile manufacturer took the oath as successor to Robert P. Lamont, who retired to become president of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The new cabinet member said:

"Naturally, like every other American, I am gratified at the unmistakably better tone that now prevails in our industries and marts of trade.

"Concerning the future trend, I will not be so bold as to venture a prediction now, but one thing is very certain; we must all exert ourselves to the utmost, striving to strength all favorable factors and to make the inevitable 'turn' come as soon and with as much security as possible."

Steamship Line, Century Old, Quits

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., announced today it would discontinue on August 31 the service between Boston and Portland, Me., which has been maintained for 109 years.

Discontinuance of the service was attributed to "uncontrolled truck competition," and a recent increase in fuel oil.

'SQUARE DEAL' FOR WALKER —ROOSEVELT

Governor to Ban All Ballyhoo Thursday At Hearing

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt intends to give James J. Walker a "square deal" when the Tammany Mayor appears before him Thursday to answer the removal charges filed by Samuel Seabury. But he will not permit the hearing to be turned into a "ballyhoo" by Walker or Seabury.

This was made plain today by persons close to Roosevelt, although the Governor refrained from any discussion of the Walker case.

Whether Mayor Walker will be permitted to call witnesses in his defense has not been determined by the Governor.

Roosevelt, according to his close associates, takes the position that he is at liberty to conduct the hearing in any way he desires; that he can restrict it to a cross-examination of the Mayor, call witnesses himself, or permit Walker to do so.

If the Governor follows the same procedure that he did in the case of Former Sheriff Thomas M. Farley, there will be no witnesses, and the hearing will be limited to a statement by Seabury, a reply by Walker and then cross-exhmination of the Mayor by the Governor.

BROTHER UNDER FIRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—An additional political eruption in affairs of Mayor James J. Walker's administration was caused today when the City Affairs' Committee sought to revoke the medical license of Walker's brother, Dr. William H. Walker.

The committee filed demands for such action with the grievance committee of the state board of regents, charging Dr. Walker and four other physicians were guilty of "fraud and deceit" because the four split fees with him in city compensation cases, allegedly attained due to Dr. Walker's political influence.

BEATEN BANKER TELLS STORY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Lying critically injured in St. John's Hospital, John B. Colegrove, 68-year-old former banker, of Taylorville, Ill., today gasped out the story of his abduction and beating.

The aged man staggered into Springfield yesterday from a field northeast of here, where he had been left to die by his assailants.

Questioned by State's Attorney Harry Grundy, he expressed doubt of his ability to identify as his captors two former depositors, James Gammaitoni, of Devereaux Heights, Ill., and Emilio Puzzuoli, of Detroit, who were captured in a blood-spattered automobile Friday night.

Colegrove said two men entered his home, beat him and dragged him out into their car. He related:

"After driving around, they dragged me out of the car and beat me again. Then they threw me into a field, where I lost consciousness."

The former banker is appealing a prison sentence for acccepting deposits while knowing that his bank was insolvent.

Died as Planes Locked

MILDRED KAUFFMAN . . . WOMAN FLYING CHAMPION KILLED

Girl Cashier Foils Theft By Buying Robber's Gun

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Miss Peggy Holmes knows what to do with a one-boy crime wave.

Her idea is that if you can buy up the culprit's weapon you'll put an end to his career, temporarily at least.

She tried it out last night and it worked to perfection, except [illegible] the weapon she bought [illegible] worth what she paid for it.

A big-eyed boy walked up to the ticket agent's cage of a rapid transit line, where Miss Holmes is employed as cashier, and said:

"I'm a robber."

As he spoke he shoved what appeared to be a pistol through the window of the cage.

Miss Holmes replied:

"I can't give you this money, buddy. There's $40 here, but it belongs to the company. And anyway, robbery's no way to get money. I'll make you a proposition. I'll buy that gun you're pointing at me."

They quibbled a bit over the price, but the boy finally agreed to take a dollar. Miss Holmes handed over $1 from her personal funds.

It was a toy water pistol.

Vets Reach N. Y. to Ask Walker for Jobs

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Upwards of 300 tanned veterans of the Bonus Expeditionary Force, many of them from Johnstown, Pa., assembled in City Hall Plaza today to ask Mayor Walker for work.

The Mayor was not at City Hall and the veterans decided to appoint a committee to wait upon him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—The bonus army as a single field force was gone today, but there was ample evidence that its shattered forces have no intention of disintegrating.

In seven spots over the country little groups of marchers have cropped up as centers of activity for their cause, cash payment of soldiers' adjusted compensation certificates. From the national capital, from Waterbury, Md.; Gettysburg and Johnstown, Pa.; Chicago, New York and Huntington, W. Va., they served notice that the bonus army is still fighting.

President Hoover's use of Army troops to clear the bonus marchers from Washington was bitterly scored by Rep. Mary T. Norton (Dem.), of New Jersey.

GARBO DROPS MASK OF MYSTERY ON ARRIVAL IN SWEDEN

LAYS SHUNNING OF PUBLICITY TO SHYNESS

World Doesn't Care What Soap I Use, She Declares

By STEN HEDMAN
International News Service.

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, Aug. 8.—For the first time since she left obscurity in Stockholm to become one of the most famous motion picture actresses in the world, Greta Garbo tore the mask of mystery from her life today.

Arriving for a holiday in her native Sweden aboard the liner Gripsholm, she revealed that it was shyness and modesty which caused her to surround her movements in secrecy and to throw about herself a wall of silence and mystery. She said:

"People really don't want to see me in real life. They go to cinemas to forget their ordinary, every day existence.

"What I do in the studios may be important. But surely the world doesn't care what soap I use to wash myself."

TIRED OF PUBLICITY

Speaking freely and without reserve, Miss Garbo greeted a score of Swedish and foreign newspapermen in the smoking room of the liner in Gothenburg Harbor. She was dressed in a yellow jumper and a brown tweed skirt. She wore no hat and her long hair fell in waves about her face. With a smile, she said:

"I'm not afraid of reporters. But sometimes I am scared of things the newspapers print about me.

"I am tired of picking up English, French, German and other newspapers sent to me in Hollywood and of reading my alleged views on love, cosmetics and health.

"I have never written a word in my life.

"I used to be amused over reading these alleged memoirs.

"But now it has become tiresome."

INDEFINITE ON PLANS

Regarding her future plans, Miss Garbo was indefinite. But she tried to make it clear she was not trying to be "mysterious." She said:

"I simply have no plans for the future. I can't even say when I am returning to Hollywood.

"What I should like would be to find some little place here in Sweden where I can hide.

"I want to use my freedom as I would like to—resting with my family and my friends. I do hope that people won't bother me."

Garbo emphatically denied reports that she planned to purchase the late Ivar Kreuger's villa off the Swedish coast and there establish her own movie producing company. Helplessly she asked:

"Can't I make it clear that I have no plans?"

Then she added:

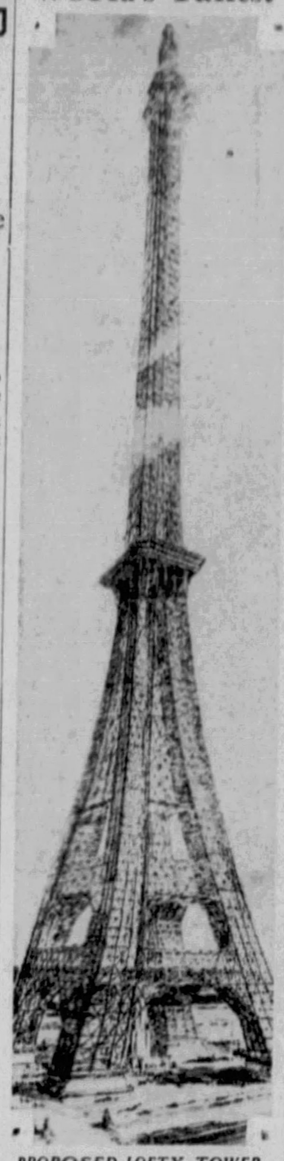
"I hope I have convinced you I am not here as an advertising stunt. I hate publicity. I am very much in earnest about it."

Miss Garbo created a tremendous impression of beauty and simplicity among the 10,000 persons who struggled at the pier for a glimpse of her as she left the boat in the noon-day sunshine.

As the actress, smiling and waving, sped through the throng to a waiting motor car, someone shouted:

"She's more beautiful than her pictures."

World's Tallest



PROPOSED LOFTY TOWER

Consulting Engineer Frank A. Randall's drawing of the lofty tower planned for erection at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. PICCARD POISED FOR FLIGHT

ZURICH, Switzerland, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Prof. Auguste Piccard, Belgian physicist, who ascended more than 50,000 feet into the stratosphere last year, said that he expected to be ready tomorrow night to make another balloon ascent.

He previously had planned to take off today, if possible. He said the only question was the weather.

Guarded from the importunities of the inquisitive by barbed wire, policemen and dogs, Prof. Piccard and Max Cosyn, young electrical engineer, were methodically busy all day with preparations for the scientific flight.

PREACHER HELD IN DEATH OF WIFE

Girl Bride Released As Jury Examines Cleric's Love Notes

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug 8.—(AP.)—A grand jury investigating the death by poison of the first wife of a 52-year-old minister, was to hear today from the county attorney of the tangled romance of the preacher and his 19-year-old girl bride.

Prominent in the evidence which County Attorney Philip K. Oldhom had prepared for the jurors' examination were passionate letters and verse which Oldham said the minister, S. A. Berrie, admitted he wrote to his present wife before the death of his first, last March.

Berrie was held in jail "for investigation," but Oldham ordered the girl wife released in custody of her mother, saying he thought she was "the victim of circumstances."

ADMIT 'AFFAIR'

Oldham said both had admitted a love affair prior to the death of the first Mrs. Berrie, but both denied any knowledge of the alleged poisoning.

Among the lines which Oldham said were penned in Berrie's hand were the following:

"To me no other one can be;
For you alone I live,
Oh, why can't we be free?"

Others told of impatience for "that blissful happy day" when they could be married.

Berrie formerly held pastorates of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church here; at Tulare, Cal.; Ralls, Tex.; Fayetteville, Ark.; Raemer, Tenn., and Searcy, Ark. He founded the Bethel Tabernacle here in May after the Cherokee Presbytery accused him of "teaching doctrines contrary to the Presbyterian faith." Berrie has appealed his conviction, in presbyterial trial, of the charges, and the case is scheduled to come before the state synod at Marlow in October.

WEDS YOUNG GIRL

The first Mrs. Berrie died last March 21 at a church gathering. On May 17, the pastor married Miss Ida Bess Bright, a Sunday school teacher in the tabernacle.

The county prosecutor said the state chemist's examination of the body of Berrie's first wife, following exhumation requested by a sister, Mrs. Clem Trotter, of Sentinel, Okla., revealed the presence of sufficient poison to cause death.

Oldham said he had learned Mrs. Berrie swallowed a capsule, presumably containing a headache powder, which she habitually carried with her, shortly before her death. The county attorney also said Berrie told him his wife was jealous and irritable from a long illness and had threatened suicide.

LIBBY HOLMAN ON WAY TO SURRENDER

Songstress to Reach North Carolina This Afternoon

that Mrs. Reynolds could leave the state if bail was permitted.

COUNSEL CONFIDENT

The action of Judge Stack in releasing Ab Walker, jointly indicted with Libby, under $25,000 bail has made counsel for Libby confident that their client will receive similar treatment.

The charge of first-degree murder contained in the joint indictment was lowered to second-degree murder in the case of young Walker. Solicitor Carlisle Higgins agreed to bail, admitting frankly that he had no evidence showing premeditation, a necessity in a first-degree murder charge.

The argument of bail for Libby based on the habeas corpus writ will prove a high spot in the mysterious death of young Reynolds, which has been labeled a murder by a cororner's jury and grand jury. However, the father of Libby has insisted that the finding of Smith's body with a bullet through his temple on the sleeping porch of his estate home was clearly a case of suicide.

The little village of Wentworth, locaiy known as a "Ghost Town," because it was once destined to be a large tobacco center, but missed the grade due to shifting of plans, will temporarily be the capital of an absorbing court battle.

Its line of communication with the outside world has been limited to one telephone strand.

But as the spotlight was turned on its placid and modest courthouse, a hectic effort to amplify the communication system was underway by representatives of telegraph companies in order to relay news of the developmens to the world.

APPEARANCE AWAITED

It will be the first public appearance of the widow of young Reynolds since she testified at a hearing before a coroner's jury in the living room of the Reynolds home three weeks ago.

That dramatic appearance of the soft-voiced singer was followed by a verdict of the coroner's jury that her 20-year-old mate had been killed at the hands of a person or persons unknown.

She came directly from her bed, where she had been confined since the tragedy. Her mother, sister and a nurse assisted her to the witness chair. Her father told the coroner that his daughter was anxious to answer any questions that might shed light on the death of the youthful heir to $15,000,000.

But while the eyes of the nation will be focussed upon the Cincinnati schoolgirl, who made good on Broadway, she will be but a silent spectator of a legal argument conducted by local counsel engaged by her father.

Supporting the legal plea for bail will be affidavits of physicians as to the shattered health of the defendant, International News Service learned.

WALKER CASE CITED

The argument will be further based upon the fact that her fellow defendant, Ab Walker, was permitted freedom, and that the prosecution has revealed no evidence to indicate that there was any claim to premeditation in the alleged crime.

The premeditation angle is necessary to any first degree murder charge, the latter being an offense not permitting bail under North Carolina law. If, cantrary to expectations, the state contests the right to granting bail to Libby, the new and secret evidence gathered by Sheriff Scott will be brought to light.

In the latter event ,the habeas corpus writ argument will approach the status of a major trial.

If Libby is granted bail, she was expected to be whisked away to another unknown destination to await the ordeal of her trial either in September or October. Her co-defendant, Ab Walker, celebrated his first full day of freedom by playing golf with friends.

It was considered improbable that Walker would see or meet Libby.

However, his lawyer, Bailey Lilpfert, will act as observer in the habeas corpus proceedings.

Snakes in Zoo Staging Rival Olympics

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The pine snakes in the Bronx Zoo, suddenly Olympics conscious, have taken up racing to the delight of visitors.

It is an "everybody chase everybody" affair similar to the old "Irish marathon" and the eight reptiles keep it up for hours at a time. There are no rules and no rewards except the applause of the spectators.

So popular has the sight become that the attendance at the zoo is expected to exceed 3,000,000 this year for the first in its history.

MURDERED MAN FOUND IN BAG

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Joseph Miller, returning home at 3 o'clock this morning, stumbled over something in a burlap sack which had been tossed into the middle of the street.

It was a dead man. Police found the man, about 35 years old, well dressed and well groomed, had been stabbed 20 times through the heart, apparently with an ice pick.

A clothesline was drawn tightly about his neck. The knees were doubled to the chin, and bound tightly, with the arms strapped to the sides.

There was no clue to the man's identity.

MRS. THADEN TESTS PLANE

CURTISS FIELD, VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Two women out to break the world's refueling endurance flight record tested their plane yesterday and then announced a few details still to be worked out may delay their take-off until Tuesday.

The fliers, Louise McPhetridge Thaden and Frances Harrell Marsalis, were scheduled to begin their attempt Sunday morning. They may start this afternoon, their manager said, if the difficult refueling process is perfected and the broadcasting arrangements are completed in time.

The women will have to stay aloft 123 hours, more than five days and nights, to break the record of 122 hours and 20 minutes made by Bobby Trout and Edna May Cooper in Los Angeles in January, 1931.

WIDOW FOUND WOUNDED

With a small puncture over her right eye, Mrs. Helen Schepp, 28, an attractive widow, of 1635 Fifth avenue, was found on the sidewalk at Taylor avenue and Monterey street, North Side. She is in a serious condition in the Presbyterian Hospital.

Mrs. Schepp told police she had left her home yesterday afternoon in company with her maid, Octa Earley, Negro, 47, of 1224 Day street, North Side, and that she had gone to the Earley woman's home. She said:

"As I stepped out of the house, something hit me on the forehead."

Police visited the Day street address and arrested the maid and Charles Jones, 40, Charles Earley and Bessie Earley, all Negroes. They were unable to state how the woman was injured, police say. They were held for further investigation.

Dr. S. J. Glass, after an examination, reported Mrs. Schepp apparently had been struck by a sharp instrument. An X-ray was taken of the wound.

CHEMIST SAVED FROM JUNGLE BARES TRIALS

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—Alone in the Peruvian jungle, without food for seven days, his chum lying dead beside him.

And yet Harold Foard, 29 year-old chemist of Bramwell, W. Va., lived to tell about it today when he arrived in New York on the Santa Clara.

The great adventure began in October, 1931, when Foard and Thomas Walsh, Jr., of Chicago, losing their mining jobs, went into the interior of Peru to do a little prospecting of their own.

They hoped to make the headwaters of the Pauteri river, but disaster son overcame them when their canoe was upset and Walsh lost his glasses, without which he could hardly see.

Then their food ran short; for seven days they did not eat, but on January 29, last, Foard caught a small bird. He said:

"I took it back to our camp. Walsh was very low. He said, 'I'm all right, don't bother about me.' So I went out to try to catch more game.

"When I came back he was lying on the floor. He was dead.

"I dug a grave with my knife and buried him."

Some time later Walsh's parents received a letter tell them to adopt Foard, but Foard said today that his chum must have written it while delirious.

Left alone, Foard wandered in a daze. He used his last cartridge to get a bird—and missed. The next day a deer came within a few feet of him, but he had no ammunition. He went mad, then, remembers nothing until he came to in the hut of a native hunter.

EMPIRE LIMITS TRADE PARLEY

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A prospect that the imperial conference would limit itself to bilateral agreements between the dominions and leave the rest of the agenda for the coming world economic conference, at which the United States will sit, appeared as the conference began its third and, perhaps, final week today.

The general belief was that Great Britain would open her doors wider to the products of the dominions, but that she would confine herself to measures looking to an international revival of trade rather than to purely empire benefit.

It was expected the new trade of Wales, on the eve of the opening of the conference, referred to the undesirability of damaging the empire's world trade.

It was expecter the new trade alignments made here will be considered as revisions of most favored nation treaties rather than an attempt to treat the rest of the world, particularly the United States, as competitors.

MISSING CHILD FOUND SLAIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The mutilated body of a young girl, identified as that of Dina Sideres, 14, was found in a vacant lot here yesterday.

The child had been beaten to death, her body wrapped in burlap sacks and apparently tossed from a motorcar. Mrs. Lola Sideres, mother of the girl, said she had been missing since Saturday night.

Police broadcast requests for the arrest of John Santis, 22, after an automobile, a length of pipe and a jacket, all stained with blood, were found in the lubricating plant where he is employed.

Investigators said freshly-spotted shirts and towels were found in his living quarters, above the shop.

Mercury Mounts To 108 at Hankow

SHANGHAI, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The temperature at Hankow today reached 108 degrees as the heat wave sweeping Central China continued. During an inspection of the army garrison at Hankow 14 soldiers collapsed and died of sunstroke.

all be happy. Wall street seems to think so. Let us hope it will not have another fainting spell.

It all began, says Mr. Snell, when Congress went home, and let business attend to its affairs, free of worry.

Not much of a compliment to Congress, but there is no doubt that business feels better, when it knows that Congress has gone to sleep, for a little while.

SOON PRESIDENT Hoover will be notified, officially, that he has been renominated by the Republicans, and it will be a big party, with all sorts of distinguished persons on hand to congratulate the President. They will include Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. The two conspicuous branches of the Roosevelt family do not hang together in politics. Alice Roosevelt Longworth and her brothers, one of them Governor of the Philippines, will vote for Hoover.

SURVEY SHOWS FREE MEDICAL AID NEED

The necessity of maintaining free medical service in hospitals was made apparent to authorities today with the completion of a clinic survey by the Hospital Association here.

Choosing 500 cases treated without charge in the clinics of Pittsburgh, the survey revealed only two applicants for medical aid made over $40 a week, and these were supporting large families.

Only 217 of the 500 were employed, 154 were on part time and only 63 working full time.

FAMILIES DESTITUTE

The survey showed the unemployed were in desperate circumstances, with whole families, some times two being supported on wages of from $1 to $5 a week.

Dr. G. Walter Zulauf, superintendent of the Allegheny General Hospital, stated:

"Their situation is so serious that only an infinitesimal percentage of the thousands seeking free medical care could, in any sense, be termed undeserving."

The survey showed 87 per cent rent houses, but few are able to pay the rent; of the remainder, who are home owners, 73 per cent of the houses are heavily encumbered.

WAGE SCALE LOW

The wage scale paid the employed included 45, who received from $1 to $5 a week; 55 from $6 to $10, while 276 received no wages at all, some for the past six months. In one instance, it showed a family of seven is dependent on the earnings of an undernourished newsboy.

Seventy per cent had no physicians, and 25 per cent had drifted away from their family doctors through inability to pay.

GIRL, 19, DIES IN HOTEL LEAP

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Miss Rosemary Johnson, 19, a pretty brunette believed to be from Cairo, Ill., leaped to her death from the eleventh floor of a hotel here. She fell eight stories to the mezzanine roof.

A note found in the girl's room said she believed she was about to lose her sight and had had financial difficulties. There were two letters, addressed to Frederic R. Johnson and Mrs. Ethel Dowling, both of Cairo. Police notified Johnson.

Detectives said they learned the girl registered at the hotel and paid one day's rent.

22 FISHERMEN DIE IN GALE

VIGO, Spain, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Twenty-two fishermen were lost in the sea when the fishing motorboat Azana capsized in a strong northerly gale off Cangas, Denortherly gale off Cangas Delearned with the return of only two survivors to the port.

The survivors, Manuel Castro Torren, 27, and Vicente Sota Perol, 21, were picked up by the Norwegian steamer Kertledre. They were exhausted by cold and fatigue after 52 hours in the water.

Six of the fishermen were caught in nets with the overturn of the boat and drowned immediately. The other 16 clung to the keel of the boat and dropped off one at a time as fatigue overtook them.

"I'm sorry, but I've been pretty busy with stickups. My drug store was held up twice in five hours last night and that makes 10 times in three years."

The dean accepted the excuse, and the robbers $3,000.

FREE 4 YEARS, CAPTURED

A search of more than four years which the United States Bureau of Investigation has conducted for Maynard Stillwell, alleged postoffice robber, was at an end today with the object of the manhunt in a Virginia prison, and another prison sentence facing him.

Convicted of robbing a postoffice at Premier, W. Va., Stillwell was sentenced in April, 1928, to serve five years in Atlanta Penitentiary. He escaped from the Charleston jail a month later while awaiting removal to the federal prison.

A few weeks ago the search came to an end when it was learned that he had been convicted of robbery in Virginia. Memorial Rites Close 13th Reunion; War Chaplain Speaks

HARRISONBURG, Va., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Veterans of the 80th (Blue Ridge) Division evacuated Harrisonburg today after memorial exercises yesterday closed their thirthirteenth annual reunion.

Representative Edmund F. Erk, of Pittsburgh, principal speaker at the Memorial services, paid tribute to the late Brigadier Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, brigade commander during the World War, who died in Washington in 1927. He was commander of thee Veterans' Association in 1921 and 1922.

'IDEAL AMERICAN'

The speaker, who termed Gen. Brett "my ideal of American manhood," praised him for his "brilliant intellect and a heart that always throbbed with tender solicitude for the welfare of "my boys."

The veterans, who came to Harrisburg from Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and 12 other states, this morning heard Father Edward Wallace, of Manhattan Beach, N. Y., division chaplain, urge them to dedicate themselves to the nation's upbuilding.

URGES CO-OPERATION

He said that if Americans, irrespective of class, religion or race, would work with the same close co-operation that characterized their wartime efforts, the nation would be better off.

Criticizing those "who fall out on little religious differences," he said "God will ask those who come to him what good they have done for their fellow man, not what faith them embraced."

Striking Wedding

Of course everyone in the smart set will be talking for ages about the striking wedding at Bayville, L. And did you hear that the bridegroom, who is a member of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders wore his full uniform, including kilts of Cameron plaid?

And the Lieut. Alastair Campbell, also one of the Queen's Own Highlanders, who was best man, wore his uniform, and so did the two young pages, Robert and Bayard Clarkson, with kilts and all.

EVENING FROCKS DESIGNED TO MEET RIGORS OF TRAVEL PACKING

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 8. — Evening clothes that will stand up under the summer strains of hot weather, packing and much travel, have always—until this year's crop of Paris styles—been the black sheep of fashion problems. In the 1932 collections of Paris gowns there are dozens of evening frocks that will resist all the endurance tests of modern vacations. They are made of materials that look frivolous, but are really sturdy and are so designed to cause the minimum of trouble on any journey or in any weather.

* * *

THERE ARE, first of all, literally hundreds of new cotton and linen fabrics that were woven particularly for making evening clothes. Many of them have threads of silk or artificial silk in their weaves—a touch which transforms them into fabrics which look very much like all-silk or all-artificial-silk. Sometimes they are in crepey weave, but often their smooth surfaces are broken up by patterns of embroidery or printed designs.

* * *

COTTONS AND linens do not complete the new scale of evening fabrics. Many of the new silks take on interesting new textures which make them especially adaptable for summer uses. One of these is the silk serge used by Chantal in the dress sketched on the middle figure in today's drawing. Though soft and pliable and glossy, this fabric may be crushed into a small ball, yet its wiry threads will straighten quickly into smoothness.

* * *

THE DRESS itself is simply cut, with straight lines come from bias cutting, and is patterned in green and white print. There is a navy blue sash-belt and a necklace of fluted blue crepe de chine. The same fluting appears at the hem and on the sleeves of the accompanying jacket of navy blue crepe de chine.

* * *

EMBROIDERED linen in pale blue fashions the Worth gown at the right. The little blue and white flowers of the embroidered pattern are recalled in the strip of artificial flowers over the left shoulder.

Miss Armstrong Wed to Son of Pittsburgher

Miss Luella M. Armstrong, of Detroit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Armstrong, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and J. Homer Schellentrager, son of E. J. Schellentrager, of the Schenley Apartments and of Philadelphia, were married Friday morning in Pittsburgh.

Miss Alma Marie Slagel and John V. Kelley, Jr., were the only attendants. After October 1 Mr. and Mrs. Schellentrager will be at home in Detroit.

The bride attended Ypsilanti Normal College and the University of Michigan, and Mr. Schellentrager attended both Cornell University and Washington and Jefferson College.

A wedding of interest in Pittsburgh was that of Miss Charlotte Conner, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Conner, of Rochester, Minn., to Dr. James Stuart McQuiston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. McQuiston, of Bartlett street, Pittsburgh, which took place Saturday afternoon, July 31, at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harold C. Ochsner, of Indianapolis, and Dr. Ray Quade served as best man for Dr. McQuiston. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. C. Gillis, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dr. and Mrs. McQuiston will be at home in Rochester, where Dr. McQuiston is a fellow in the Mayo Foundation.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. C. McQuiston.

One of Pittsburgh's prominent clubwomen, Mrs. Florence Dow Kinney, of Parkview avenue, and Oliver J. Haller, of Shady avenue, were married Tuesday afternoon in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Carey Dow, of West Findlay street, Carey, O., Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Paul R. Clouser, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church.

Flowers and ferns formed the setting for the wedding. The bride wore an aquamarine triple-sheer frock with a black lace hat, and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

A reception and a dinner followed the ceremony with yellow roses and snapdragons and candelabra holding yellow tapers used in decorating the bride's table. Gladioli and roses were used throughout the home.

The Hallers are now motoring through the East, and will be at home in Shady avenue after September 15.

Among the Pittsburgh guests at the wedding were Harold Haller, Miss Emmy Lou Haller, Miss Frances Haller, Miss Dorothy Miller and Edward Mosher.

Announcement has been made of the betrothal of Miss Antionette Heimback Laidley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Laidley, of Carmichaels, to Edward Hamlin Lawrence, son of Edward A. Lawrence, of Balph avenue, Bellevue.

Activities of state and district courts of the order in relieving suffering and distress among several thousand families of all denominations, and in obtaining work for needy men and women, will be reported to national officers and directors of the Catholic Daughters of America at their supreme board conclave in Washington, August 13 to 16. The supreme regent, Miss Mary C. Duffy, of Newark, who was leader of the Catholic Daughters' pilgrimage to the International Eucharistic Congress in Dublin, will preside at the meetings, to be held in the Mayflower Hotel.

Fine Furs

At the Lowest Cost of a Lifetime!

OUR Fur Buyer's experience in the fur market goes back 30 years; others of us can remember back a longer or shorter time, but none of an interested group that discussed the subject recently could remember fur garments of present standard ever selling at prices as low as are quoted in this year's August Fur Sale.

Thirty years ago, when a dollar was considerably more than it is today, Alaska Seal was the fashionable and coveted fur. Alaska Seal Jackets at that time sold in the neighborhood of $250, but they were jacket lengths, whereas today's Alaska Seals are long coats.

The August Sale price for a Horne Alaska Seal Coat, which is at least a third longer and requires a proportionately greater amount of fur, is $265. The styling is modern and superb, and the linings, trimmings and skins are Horne standard.

Black Caracul
$285

Coats in the model pictured, with large, flattering collar of real silver fox. Also coats with deep, cape-type collars of self fur, and intriguing new sleeves.

Hudson Seal*
$135

The finer, dependable grade of Hudson Seal*, for which this store has long been famous. Youthful models for misses and junior misses; and women's types of mature charm and dignity.

Japanese Mink, $275

Of the very finest Japanese Mink available, produced by our regular maker, who specializes in coats of this fur. Eight models, for women, short women, misses and junior-misses.

Dark Muskrat, $55

Coats of rich, dark muskrat ... fresh, new skins with grand possibilities of wear in them. Models with double, upstanding or large shawl collar, and new style sleeves.

A reasonable first payment will hold furs selected during the August Sale for later delivery.

FLIERS BROADCAST -:- Mrs. Thaden's Plane Heard on Network -:- RADIO PROGRAMS

Mattern-Griffin Reception On WCAE; Irene Beasley, Sannella in New Series

Andy Sannella, who at one time was soloist and conductor on 11 NBC programs a week, leads his new All Star Radio Orchestra in the first of a series of programs over an NBC-WEAF network, including WCAE, today at 5:45. The broadcasts will be heard each Monday and Saturday at the same hour, and will feature a large group of widely known artists. The maestro, who has been associated with NBC since 1927, announces his own programs for the first time. He has chosen "Moonlight Bay" as his theme song. Soloists on today's program are Sam Herman, xylophonist, and Billie Dauscha, blues singer, recently discovered by Sannella.

LOIS MILLER

Popular singing star who is a headliner of the Nite Club of the Air on WCAE tonight at 11.

Charles S. (Casey) Jones, veteran pilot and vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, assumes the role of radio announcer in the Columbia network's attempt to broadcast direct from the plane in which Frances Marsalis and Louise Thaden, former Pittsburgh axiatrix, will try for a refueling endurance record above New York City. Following the takeoff scheduled today, Columbia has planned, tentatively, two broadcasts a day from the plane, all of which will be carried locally by WJAS. Tomorrow's broadcast is scheduled at 11:45 a. m. A broadcast also is scheduled at 6:45 tonight if the attempt is started by that time.

Mrs. Thaden

New York's official reception to James Mattern and Bennett Griffin, who established a North Atlantic record in their attempted round-the-world flight, is broadcast over an NBC network including WCAE today at 4 p. m. The fliers arrived in New York Friday. Today's ceremonies take place in the City Hall with Mayor James Walker officiating.

Program Pointers

An operatic excerpt and four ever-popular heart songs comprise Richard Crooks' program with William Daly's Orchestra on WCAE tonight at 8:30. . . Rhode Island, the smallest state in the Union, receives the Parade of States Salute starring Theodore Webb, baritone, and Frank Black's Orchestra on WCAE at 9:30. A medley of tunes by George M. Cohan, a native of Providence, is a highlight of the broadcast. Bruce Barton's tribute to the state traces its history from Roger Williams.

Mr. Crooks

The Gypsies go Spanish on their program over WCAE tonight at 9 o'clock, featuring a special Max Terr arrangement of a medley including El Relicario, Violetera, Gitannette, Celita Linda and Clavolitas.

A new children's program, the Red Rover Club, makes its debut on WJAS today at 5. The presentation, heard five times weekly, consists of tales of adventure and hidden treasure by "Capt. Fearless."

Wilkinsburg is saluted during the Westinghouse Parade on KDKA at 6:15 tonight. George Rankin, Jr., vice president of the First National Bank of Wilkinsburg, is guest speaker.

A unique arrangement of Harold Stokes' composition, "The Mystery Man," sung by a male quartet, is a highlight of the Contented program on KDKA at 8 p. m.

Irene Beasley, songstress and narrator, inaugurates a new series of programs known as "Happy Time with Irene Beasley" on WJAS tonight at 6:05.

Fan Fare

Seven years ago Sophia Mecorney was a teacher in the Plainville (Conn.), High School, where Phillips H. Lord was principal. First Lord made her assistant principal and then he made her his wife. She has helped him in all of his radio work, including the Seth Parker programs in which she takes the part of "Lizzie" . . . Although Donald Novis is singing over NBC networks from New York, he is still studying with his Los Angeles vocal instructor . . . His teacher listens to Novis' programs each week, makes a recording of his criticisms and sends them from Pasadena to his pupil in New York.

Mrs. Lord

Milton Rettenberg, who presents two-piano programs with Jack Shilkret, is a member of the New York Bar . . . He practiced law in New York for a while and then gave it up for a musical career before the microphone.

In the absence of any conclusive opinion on the subject, "When is a crooner not a crooner," Lanny Ross forwards the following:

"When a tenor or a baritone or a bass singer sings softly, he is crooning."

Cliff Edwards has been booked to co-star with William Haines in a new talking picture, "Let's Go."

Riggs and Moke, the Crazy Pair, and the Andrini Brothers, string aces and comedians, will be starred in "Crazy People," a new WCAE program starting Thursday.

Lefty Flynn keeps himself fit by an hour's workout daily in the barn he has transformed into a gymnasium at his Greenwich, Conn., home.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA CAUSE DISCOVERED

Those who suffer from hay fever or bronchial asthma will be gratified to learn that at last science has succeeded in discovering the basic cause of these two maladies.

Fortunately for all who suffer from these diseases a way has also been found to overcome this basic cause in the individual instead of merely treating the surface symptoms, as has been done in the past.

Because of this discovery, thousands of people have been freed of their asthma and hay fever.

Full information and an important booklet on the discovery of the cause of hay fever and bronchial asthma will be sent free to readers of this publication. Simply write to L. P. Highley, Mgr. Dept. 8457, 126 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Wife Worried About Change In Husband's Disposition

Here is the story of a young wife who pitched in and carried the load for the whole family, when her husband lost his job.

A noble story of love and loyalty, patience, faith and fighting courage!

And how is it being rewarded? Does the husband she has helped appreciate her?

No, he doesn't. He sulks and sneers, calls her vile names, sometimes even strikes her.

And does that prove that he is worthless? Not necessarily. Read on:

"Dear Sally:

"Please tell me what to do. I don't know, myself, and I am so unhappy!

"I am 23. My husband is 27. We have been married four years, and have a darling little boy of 2, whom we both love very much. Here is the problem that is worrying me.

GIVEN ALLOWANCE

"Out of the four years I've been married, I've worked all the time but six months. When our baby was three months old, I went back to my position as a secretary.

"Now, in my work I come in contact with many people, and know what it is to be liked and respected by them, so I can't see where my husband has any reason to treat me the way he does. He has been out of work for the last six months and I have been giving him an allowance out of my salary, besides keeping the household, providing for baby and myself.

"Before baby came Tom treated me with the utmost respect, and seemed to love me sincerely; but it seems that after baby came he changed. He seemed to lose his respect for me, and now he calls me vile names, and sometimes even strikes me, in a fit of temper.

"Do I stand for it? No. I still do respect him, but I will never take a beating from any man. However, he never seems sorry for anything he does or says. I just can't understand what is the matter with him.

LOSING LOVE

"Shall I still keep on being the bread winner for the family planning the next day's meals, clean, wash, iron and mend, as I am doing now? I sew most of baby's clothes, and my own. Now tell me that he has something to kick about.

"What I want to know is, how can I hurt him, make him wake up to the fact that I'm not just a human machine, and that day by day, in the face of the way he treats me, I am losing my love for him, until I could just scream when he touches me?

"How can I bring back the good old happy days when we were carefree, gay and happy-go-lucky? Four years of marriage shouldn't wear all that off, should it?

"Would it help if I left him? I hate to do that, when he has no means of going on. Do you think it would wake him up? I hate publicity and scandal, but you can see the future is not very bright. What can I do?

"ELSIE."

That's a tough row you're hoeing, and no mistake, youngster. I don't blame you for feeling that you are getting a raw deal; and I suppose it would soothe your outraged feelings for a while, if I gave Tom the works. But I'm not going to do it—not yet. For I suspect that Tom is better than he seems, and that you love him, and life would be a pretty dreary affair if I advised you to drive him away.

So let's try to help Tom, instead of hurting him. Let's try to study his side of the question. It is a wonderful thing for a woman to help a man, but have you ever thought how it must humiliate that man to have to take that help? Have you ever thought that his roughness may be just the reflection of his inner shame and despair and resentment against life?

HAVE TALK WITH HUSBAND

I suspect that Tom acts ugly because he feels useless, and he is taking it out on you—being human and full of kinks. And the truth is that he probably doesn't know himself, why he acts the way he does.

What can you do? You can sit down and have a kindly but straight-from-the-shoulder talk with him. Explain to him, just as you have explained to me, just what he is doing to your love for him. Let him see that he is alienating his best friend, and that it's up to him to help you keep your home and your marriage together.

Then show him that you do love him, even if he is playing in hard luck, and that you'll keep on loving him, if he'll be the man you married.

And then get back the laughter and the comradeship you've lost along the way. Go to a show, or out to dinner, or to a dance, sometimes.

It may seem extravagant—but it'll help you both to get your balance back.

Motherhood Still Woman's Best Career, Believes Fay King

By FAY KING

Long ago a girl who did not marry had to bear ridicule from her friends and be dubbed an "old maid."

But in these modern times girls decide to have a business career and never to marry, and no one thinks anything of it.

And, of course, that is entirely up to a girl, and with economic independence a girl does not have to marry because that is the only career there is for her.

But the girl who marries and raises a family is still making the wise choice.

Countless mothers have seen several of their children achieve important places in life. While a career at best is only a single achievement and soon fades, leaving a woman alone with only her memories.

Liver Extract Injections Aids Penicious Anemia Cases

Within the last five years tremendous strides have been made in the study of pernicious anemia. At one time this disease was frequently fatal and little was known concerning a cure; then came the discovery of the use of liver in the diet as a means of combatting it.

Dr. Copeland

Shortly after the discovery of liver as a curative agent in pernicious anemia, research developed a liver extract. This was an important forward step, because many sufferers could not eat the required amounts of liver without marked digestive disturbances. In many cases they had to discontinue the use of liver in the diet.

Now comes the important announcement that a solution of liver extract has been made which can be injected into the veins or muscles. This is an outstanding achievement. The results obtained from this new method of treatment have been more than satisfactory in a good many cases.

The effects of pernicious anemia may cause a critical condition, and when the anemia is far advanced, repeated transfusions of blood are necessary to prevent a fatal outcome.

It is in such cases that the new method of liver injection is extremely beneficial. There is a response to the injection within 24 hours, while if liver is eaten, 10 days or more may elapse before beneficial results are noted.

Many patients who find it difficult to eat large quantities of liver, and fail to respond to the liver diet, derive great benefit when given liver extract by the injection method.

The injections, given once a week, do not cause any pain and rarely, if ever, result in uncomfortable reaction.

The treatment should never be given without the supervision of a physician. The diagnosis of the disease should be confirmed first by a blood count, and the blood count repeated after several injections to determine the progress made.

In mild cases the number of injections may be gradually decreased, but in more severe cases it may be necessary to continue weekly injections for a prolonged period of time.

We are indeed indebted to the painstaking and brilliant work of those scientists who have awakened hope of the cure of pernicious anemia.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

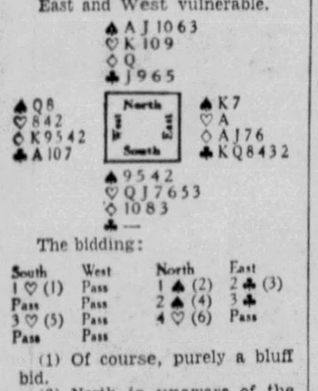
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Successful Psychic

While we make a study of the science of bidding may deprecate the so-called "physic" or bluff bids based on values scarcely more substantial than gossamer, the underlying wish dormant in every human heart to give the "under-dog" a chance, makes us fairly resigned when, through brilliant bidding, concealing weakness, the stronger side is deprived of something that is clearly theirs. Human as this is, it is also scientifically accurate, because if players at the contract table have the balance of strength, they should be able to determine that fact and thus frustrate the machinations of the bluff bidders.

An interesting example of bluff tactics, which resulted successfully, occurred at one table in a recent duplicate game with the cards shown below:

South—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡ (1)	Pass	1 ♠ (2)	2 ♣ (3)
Pass	Pass	2 ♠ (4)	3 ♣
3 ♡ (5)	Pass	4 ♡ (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) Of course, purely a bluff bid.

(2) North is unaware of the bluff nature of South's bid.

(3) East should double. The two club overcall is entirely too weak.

(4) North should bid two hearts here. The spade suit is not strong enough for a rebid, but this possibly is a contributing factor in the mystification of East and West.

(5) South fears that West will awaken to the fact that East, vulnerable, cannot be bidding on air; therefore, the unjustified Rebid of a bluff Opening.

(6) North rightly carries the bidding to game.

In the play, South made four hearts, playing the spades for an even break, and ruffing Dummy's four clubs, in his own hand. He, therefore, lost only one diamond, one heart and one spade.

This was a remarkable result, in view of the fact that East and West had a vulnerable Small Slam contract at their command in either clubs or diamonds.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Dealer opens with one heart. What should partner bid, with no intervening bid, holding these cards:

♠ 9 7 4 2 ♡ 9 6 3 2 ◇ A J ♣ 10 7 6

Answer—Bid two hearts—a shaded Raise. When partner has made an Opening suit bid of one, every effort should be made to keep the bidding open in order to give the Opening bidder an opportunity to bid again, either by a negative no-trump response on about 1½ honor-tricks or a Raise on as little as 3 supporting-tricks. This hand contains 3-plus supporting-tricks—that is, ½ for the long spade, ½ for the long heart, 1 ruffing-trick (the doubleton diamond in conjunction with four trumps) and 1-plus honor-trick (Ace-Knave diamonds).

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Tea Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I have been invited to an afternoon bridge tea and as no specified time was given I would like your advice.

2. Would you give some suggestions for inexpensive entertainment of a visiting lady guest?

I am a daily reader of your column, as are other members of my family, and receive much help from your writings. L.

1. I am sure that there was some mistake about this, and that your hostess forgot to state the time. Of course, it is important that you know, if you are going to accept, and it would be quite correct and taken-for-granted for you to telephone or write your hostess and ask her what time she expects her guests.

2. A tea party, which can be so delightful and such an evidence of gracious hostess-ship, is one of the most inexpensive ways of entertaining for a woman guest. You can plan your party with such perfection, with such discrimination as to the things you serve to eat, that your guest will be delighted. You can plan to play bridge, if you wish, or just have it a "talky" tea.

Luncheon, too, may be very simply and inexpensively done, and a luncheon may bring together intimately very special friends to whom you wish to introduce your house guest. You may have bridge afterward, if you wish, or take your guests to a good movie.

Sunday morning breakfast, served buffet fashion and very informally, is a very popular form of entertainment now, and for this you may, of course, invite both women and men. And this can be beautifully done with extremely small expense . . . just breakfast dishes and perhaps some addition of one item that you "feature" . . . popovers, for instance, or waffles, or scones, or something of this kind.

Similar to this is the Sunday evening buffet, where delicious and inexpensive dishes may be served . . . cold meats of several kinds, all kinds of salads, compotes of fruits, layer cakes or small cakes. This is an especially hospitable plan for summertime.

A Breach of Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Is it proper for a girl to rise when being introduced to a girl's mother and father in the presence of boys?

2—Is it a bad breach of etiquette not to? I have seen girls remain seated very often and wondered if that were not correct any more. MARY.

1—If the introduction to the mother and father is at the same time, the girl does rise, in courtesy to the mother. If only the father is introduced to her, she need not rise.

2—Yes, it is a serious breach of etiquette for a girl not to rise when she is introduced to an older woman, and especially when that woman is the mother of a friend and, as I judge from your question, the hostess.

And it is a serious breach of manners—education—for a mother not to teach this to her daughter, from the time she is a wee lassie. I never could understand how a girl feels comfortable when she remains seated as she is introduced to the mother of a friend, for she deserves this mark of manners and respect on two counts, as an older woman and as the hostess of the home.

Household Hints

A coat of varnish saves the pattern on the printed linoleum rug.

Ice cream boxes can be washed and dried to serve as containers for the packed lunch.

If you have no cookie tins, bake the cookies on the bottom of an inverted pie plate. They will be less likely to burn than when baked in the pan.

One woman has discovered excellent summer spreads by using new unbleached sheets. She sews on some bright colors in applique with large loose stitches that can be removed easily. The spreads will stay clean over the summer months and in the fall the applique is removed and the sheets take their place with the others after they are laundered.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When walking, point toes straight ahead. Any other position is a strain on the ankle. Run over heels, are bad for leg hinges.

Restricting the food to one's normal maintenance diet—which means eating just enough good groceries to satisfy the appetite and not one crumb more—is one way of giving the laugh to extra adipose tissues. If a gal can't resist the good things of the table, and would retain a svelte shape, she must work off calories by means of vigorous muscular exercise. Weight can be controlled. But not when the reducer is self-indulgent or afflicted with a wavering will.

Not much can be done about a large nose unless it goes to the facial surgeon for a trimming. But dark powder will make it appear less nosy, and the right shape of the hat can flatter it somewhat. The middle parting of the coiffure is not for the gal who has an over-developed proboscis.

Tenseness, a jittery nervous system, emotional upsets get their revenge by placing upon the feminine countenance ugly lines and causing tissues to lose tone and resiliency. No use playing with cold cream and other beauty props unless one forms the habit of keeping upon the face a calm, serene expression. Frown lines, especially, are self inflicted.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Cliff Edwards (Ukulele Ike) and Nancy Dover will do that altar thing in about a month. He departs for the coast today . . . The "handsome and mysterious" companion of Ann Harding was Rollo Peters until he returned to his Westport place . . . I see that the United States government and the newspapers keep calling it the Olympiad. In point of fact, the Olympiad is the time between the Olympic games and designates a period of time, not the games . . . Estelle Taylor and E. Burns are dining together regularly . . . Mary Lawler, who married Lyn Lary, of the Yankees a year ago, is plotting a return to the stage...It's a girl at the George Laits and ditto at the Jack DeMaze's (Helen McKay)...Those "Do You Inhale?" ads by John La Gatta are posed by two gorgeous gals and one chap. The brunette is Gardio Olsen—the blonde is Geraldine Mansfield and the man is Douglas Blackley.

Ysobel Mason and Ernest Andrews are merging next month ...The Peter Weismullers (Johnny's brother) and she is Dorothy Rumble of Collitehumor were divorced in Chicago this week...Dorothy Dell is now among the eyefuls at the Riviera across the Bridge...Frances Williams is headlining at the Ross Fenton Farm...Mary Hay is returning to the footlights with Charles Sabin and one dance they do probably will be stopped after the initial performance. It deals with the Nancy Cunard-Harlem matter ...I understand that Peggy Fears and not White will be chairman of the Beauty Exposition...Arthud Hoerl of 220 W. Forty-second will give a job to that "former Belasco star" who is "sleeping in the Park"... Billy Petrolle's manager has been looking over all movies showing Canzoneri in action to see his fighting tactics...Chas. Winninger of "Show Boat" and Gertrude Walker are voom-voom.

That Mae Clarke-Henry Froelich affair is on the mend, they say . . . Robert Young, who lost the decision over Virginia Bruce to J. Gilbert, has had his wounds healed by Gertrude Michael . . . The Owen Moores (She was Katherine Perry) are trying to arouse that spark, again . . . Bee Jackson's mother is critically ill at the Post-Graduate Hosp. . . . A friend of mine just returned from London, told me that the newest gag in manicures there calls for striped fingernails. It takes two hours to prepare both paws . . . That married pair in "Show Boat" only talk to each other during their act . . . Toni Preston has a new idea in rings. She had one made of crystal with her honey's photo inserted underneath . . . No truth at all to those reports about Charles Farrell and Virginia Valli.

Here's some more Garbo stuff you might use. She was at the Gramatan in Bronxville under the name of Mary Gerritt, when she wasn't at the local hotels avoiding the mob. The hotel there did everything to protect her from newspapermen and let her use a private entrance. The day before she sailed a negro porter was leading Greta out of the private entrance. The hotel manager who was escorting her kept calling her "Mary" to throw the porter off the scent, but the porter had an idea she was a movie actress. So when he finally got her into a car—he smiled and said: "That's the time we fooled them newspaper guys, isn't it, Miss Pickford?"... They've discovered that thunder is most helpful to people who are deaf—so the newest thing is a record that plays nothing but rolls of thunder—and some doctors are using them in treating patients . . . Mildred Palmer was in and told me that the "island" at 93rd and Broadway is sprouting corn. It seems that there was an accident there last year in which a lot of seed was spilled on the spot, and the result is a fine field of corn right in the middle of Broadway. Sounds like a good tip for the news reel editors, no?

The "Folies Bergere" cast, I understand, has only signed for a fortnight . . . Oakland, Trivers and Murray, the boys who did several things for the last "Follies," have some delightfully novel melodies and lyrics in their latest score, "Laugh It Off" . . . Peter Arno, by the way, has done his first number with Dick Himber, which Shapiro-Bernstein has accepted for publication . . . Of course, the cover on the sheet music will be done by Arno . . . Here's one for Ripley. That every horse in a race can win and wager makers cannot win on any of them! . . . This actually happened on the last day at Empire (July 30) . . . There were three gee-gees in the race —yet nobody made a nickel on the result, and some even lost a little although they picked the winner . . . The track mob can look it up and learn why . . . Virginia Biddle is on one of the no limit leaves of absence from the Hollywood rendezvous, and they hear that she will shortly marry Enoch Johnson of Atlantic City.

Among other indoor sports in town is that one at the Barn in Greenwich Village where they hold turtle races. Plenty of laughs . . . Frank Buhler, who was general manager for the old Stanley Company of America at $40,000 a year, has just taken a job as manager of a Fox Theater in Philly at the regular manager's wage.

Mrs. Leslie Carter has purchased a villa near Monte Carlo and is leaving the American scene for good . . . Contrary to what has appeared in the papers, Mary Nolan's husband calls for her every night at the theater and they go home together . . .

There are as many, if not more newspaper and magazine correspondents in Hollywood than actors.

Enright Screen Shows 'The First Year'

What terrible things can happen to two loving people during the first year of married life is shown in "The First Year," starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in the Enright. Farrell portrays a small town real estate broker and Janet is cast as his wife. Money troubles almost break up the marriage but not quite.

Claudette Colbert has been assigned the coveted role of leading lady in "The Phantom President," George M. Cohan's starring picture for Paramount. The cast for this political satire now includes Jimmy Durante, George Barbier, Louise Mackintosh, Sidney Toler, Jameson Thomas and Julius McVicker.

Romance May Give Way To Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 8. Red-headed Virginia Bruce, the apple of John Gilbert's eye, received a new film assignment—and Hollywood is wondering whether it will postpone her marriage to the star.

The former Ziegfeld beauty will play one of the principal roles in "Kongo," which goes into immediate production at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. As she will be busy on the picture for several weeks, it looks as if Jack will have to wait a while to put the platinum and diamond band upon her finger.

John Gilbert

The marriage, Jack told me the other day, was scheduled to take place as soon as he and Ina Claire received their final decree of divorce. Court records show the interlocutory decree was entered August 5, 1931. Now it takes only a formal application to cut the marital ties for good.

IMPETUOUS COURTSHIP

Strange thing about the romance of Jack and Virginia. He met her when she came up for a lead in his picture. After an impetuous courtship, they announced their engagement. Hollywood smiled indulgently. They said it was a phoney, a publicity stunt. When Jack began showering expensive jewelry and gave a handsome roadster to his fiancee, the film crowd were a little less sure. Now, it seems, the two were on the level all the time. Hollywood stands corrected.

Kindly old Carl Laemmle gave them a laugh the other day when the Finnish Olympic team visited Universal.

Paavo Nurmi was along and explained through an interpreter that he had been disqualified for the games.

Uncle Carl smiled and gave him a pat on the back. He said:

"Well if they don't want you, I can always use you as a leg man."

BOULEVARD TALK:

What a break for some autograph hunter if he had happened to attend the performance of "Reunion in Vienna" the other evening. Three of Hollywood's most elusive stars were in the audience —John Barrymore, Clive Brook and Ronald Colman . . . Bert Wheeler and "Sugar" Geise, petite blonde chorine, are making eyes at each other these nights at the Frolics. The two were as thick as that before Bert went East . . . They're saying that the romance between Martha Sleeper and Randolph Scott is cold. Stanley Smith squired her to the opening of Jimmie Grier's band at the Biltmore . . . Mary Carlile and Jerry Horwin are seeing each other regularly . . . The personal appearance racket snares another Hollywood star, Chic Sale will entertain San Francisco audiences for a week . . . Ken Murray will have you believe that the Los Angeles Olympic Games are more impressive than those at Antwerp. He rushed back here to make the comparison . . . Many a feminine eye followed Lilyan Tashman in her appearance at the big stadium. Lilyan wore a special Olympic blue flannel sport outfit with a hat duplicating the shape of those worn by the American girl athletes . . . Newest book on Hollywood is "Tattle Telling on the Stars," by Soni Lee, former reporter and newsfan magazine writer.

PLAN THRILL FILM

Despite lukewarm reports from some of the smaller theaters the shocker may be found in most of the new studio programs. Warners are enthusiastic about their "Doctor X" and will begin work shortly on "Wax Works," an unproduced play by Charles S. Belden. This picture will have the added novelty of taking place in a single set—a wax work museum similar to the famous establishment of Madame Tussaud in London. It appears certain that Michael Curtiz will direct "Wax Works" and Barbara Stanwyck is being considered for one of the principal roles.

Eyes Most Important In Make-Up

The eyes constitute the most important single feature of a player's make-up according to James Barker, head of the Fox studio makeup department on the West Coast. Bad eyes—that is, eyes that are too light to photograph properly—have caused the rejection of more applicants for screen tests than any other one disqualification. From a photographic standpoint, black eyes are best, brown next and green third. Blue eyes must be a dark blue, or they are "lost" in the camera; light blue is fatal.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

Wizard of the Films

I DON'T know if many people have noticed the change, but the stories from Hollywod are not what they once were. During the past year or so, the motion picture executive has been talked about as an executive and not as a character comedian. What has become, for example, of the familiar tales in which Jakey, the office boy, became a director overnight? Or of the producers who paid no attention to the handwriting on the wall—because they couldn't read it?

Gone, my friends. Mostly all gone. Here and there, of course, one will pop up. But the time when the columnist could depend upon Hollywood eccentricities as a source of daily material seems to have vanished forever. The men who ruled the works have, in many spots, been replaced by bankers who, for the past few years, have so unsuccessfully kidded us.

Personally, I miss the good, old, Hollywood fables. Sitting down at Barney Gallant's the other night with Mr. Charles Butterworth, Mr. Walter O'Keefe, Mr. Bobby Dolan and several other estimable gentlemen, the conversation turned to some of the famed figures in the better days of Hollywood. And before I knew it, I was listening to the story of one whom you might recognize under another name. Here he will be known as Mr. Milton Blotch.

Milton was a product of New York's lower East Side. Papa was a tailor who minded his own business except on those occasions when he found notes in the pockets of his customer's trousers.

From a very early age, Milton began to show traces of the genius that was to land him eventually in the motion picture business. After graduating from public school, the boy developed notions of his own. He was too clever, he felt, to work for anyone else. Why should anyone be able to tell him what to do when he knew all businesses very thoroughly?

He loafed on the corner with the other boys. His friends tolerated him until he insisted on showing them the proper way to loaf. Whereupon they tossed him out of the gang, and Milton was compelled to idle by himself. That was, however, okay with him. On the theory, I suppose, that half a loaf was better than none.

For the next few years, he remained with the elder Blotch—and naturally at papa's expense. I might tell you here that papa Blotch had been tailoring for 20 years without a determined complaint. So in walked Irving one afternoon and attempted to show his father how a button should be sewed on. That was too much for his father to stand—and out went the young man on one of his large ears.

Thus, at the age of 22, Milton found itimself on his own. He could expect assistance from no one—except relatives and friends. It was, as we boys from Harvard always say, a crooel, crooel world . . .

Along came Becky, a substantial girl with—more important—a substantial dowry. Her father had started the old Whatsis Film Corporation and he had done remarkably well with it. That was all Milton had to know. He became Becky's sweet cookie and, after a decent lapse of time, they were made as one. Shortly after the honeymoon had been written into the records, Milton went on the payroll of the Whatsis Film Corporation—and just in time, too. A week later he was in Hollywood; bag, baggage and Becky.

It took Milton just about 12 months, so they tell me, to put himself perilously close to the top of the heap in the Whatsis Film Corporation. And after the year had gone by, a big dinner was held and Milton's father-in-law retired as the active head of the concern. Milton was made the general supervisor, which meant that he could do just about as he pleased.

And you can take it from my informants that he pleased to do plenty. He felt that he must have a new organization for two reasons. The first was that the studio needed new blood. And the second was that the old group had long since grown wise to him.

So Milton hired and fired with reckless abandon. He engaged a noted author at a fabulous salary—and fired him shortly after. Seems as though Milton wanted a story built around the title, "Flaming Hatreds," and the author turned in a script without a fire scene in it. What did that writer think; that Milton was a fool?

A few tricks along similar lines and Milton was the talk of the motion picture world. Most of the folks thought that he was plain goofy, but there were a few who insisted that he was a genius. It didn't make much difference how you looked at it, however, because those were the golden days of Hollywood—and the biggest fool with the loudest voice was generally looked upon as the greatest genius.

Then came the blow-off. The Whatsis Film Corporation was about to plunge into one of their super-super-super-super-specials. It was to be a story of prison life—and the big smash in the picture was to be a scene of a prison break. Walls would topple. Men would die. The troops were to be blown from bridges. The big liner would sink.

It goes without saying that Milton, himself, wrote the story. He turned it over to the director with plenty of advice.

"I'm a very busy man," he said, "and I'm not going to be able to spend much time on this picture with you. Besides, I won't have to. I wrote it myself, and it will certainly be an epic no matter what happens.

"Get to work at once and remember your schedule. Keep the expenses down as low as possible." . . .

In due time, the picture was completed. Milton had gone to New York to open a chain of tailoring shops for his father—and he returned to Hollywood on the night the picture was to be previewed. The big executive walked into the theater and sat down to watch his great story unfold.

Along came the grand climax—that terrible prison break. Just as it was fading out and the picture was preaching the spot where the hero would ride into the dawn with his beautiful bride, Milton leaped to his feet and dragged the director to the rear of the theater.

"You're a director?" he snarled. "You're a nothing! What kind of a scene was that? My script called for a prison break—and what did you give me? Do you dare to stand there and tell me, Milton Blotch, that that scene was supposed to represent a prison break?"

The director stiffened.

"I'm afraid I'll have to do just that, Mr. Blotch," he replied curtly. "I didn't direct that scene. You told me to cut the expenses, so I borrowed that portion of the film from another department.

"It happens to be the newsreel shots of the prison riot and fire in the Ohio State Penitentiary." . . .

Collier, Sr., Has Role In New Picture

Due to a change in characterizations, William Collier, Sr., has been signed to assume the role originally scheduled for James Gleason in "Madison Square Garden," which Charles R. Rogers is producing for Paramount. Collier will appear as the matchmaker at the famous sports arena which forms the background of the story.

Mitzie Green Called Back to Screen

Mitzi Green, popular comedienne of stage and screen, is returning West to resume her screen career under the banner of RKO Radio Pictures. Little Miss Green has been in vaudeville following her hit in the screen edition of "Girl Crazy."

PLAYS AND PLAYERS -:- By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Some time in the nineties William T. Stead, a noted London editor of his day, visited Chicago, among other cities in America. Like most literary Englishvisitors he wrote a book—and titled it "If Christ Came To Chicago." Now it is going to be filmed and it is said that opposition to using the original name is developing, and that the film makers are determined to retain the title as is, because the book teaches a moral lesson applying, not to Chicago alone, but to any large city. Jack Lait, famed writer, has been assigned to write the screen story, and nobody knows Chicago better than Lait does, inasmuch as he covered that city thoroughly as a newspaper reporter. Selection of a director and cast awaits completion of the manuscript.

Since it has been announced that Joe Palooka, comic strip character, would reach the screen, there has been speculation as to who would play the title role. Joe E. Brown, Jack Oakie, Stuart Erwin and Andy Devine, who first clicked as a good-natured boob in "The Spirit of Notre Dame," have been mentioned.

Rod LaRocque, screen star who has not been in a film for several seasons, will make his first New York stage appearance in 19 years when he is seen in the cast of "Domino," to be presented by William A. Brady, August 16. Two seasons ago Rod toured the country with his wife, Vilma Banky, in a comedy, "Cherries Are Ripe," but the play did not get into the burg known as the metropolis. Mrs. Brady, better known as Grace George, adapted the piece from the French of Marcel Archard.

Production of the film version of "The Animal Kingdom," which had its stage premiere here last fall, will begin in Hollywood within a couple of weeks. Leslie Howard, star of the Philip Barry comedy, will play his original role in the photoplay. Opposite him will be Irene Dunne, who now is on vacation in Honolulu. Miss Dunne has two especially fine screen achievements to her credit, her portrayals in "Cimarron" and "Symphony of Six Million."

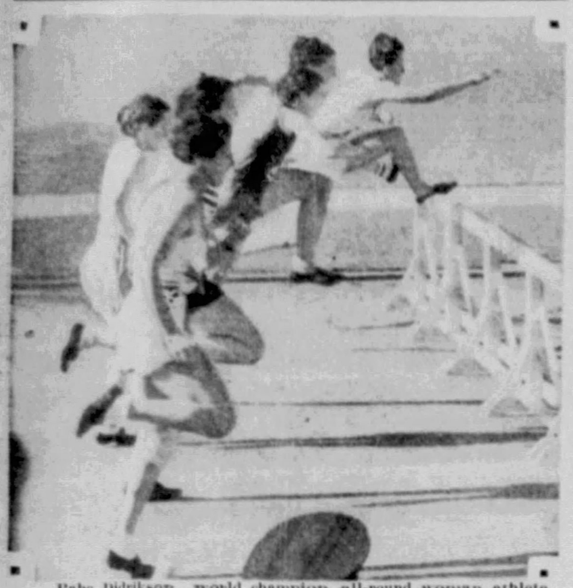
SPORT COMMENT

By Harry Keck, Sports Editor

Babe Didrikson. All-'Round Champ. Says 'Be a Tomboy.'

Vejar Irish Ace. Olympic Disqualifications. Bucs' Disastrous Trip.

CHANGE AT DUQUESNE GARDEN



Babe Didrikson, world champion all-round woman athlete, leading the field home in one of her conquests at the Olympic Games. She is breaking the world record for the 80-meter hurdles, setting a mark of 11.7 seconds. She is at the extreme right. This is an International News Photo Service picture.

BE A TOMBOY! That's Mildred Babe Didrikson's recipe for becoming a world champion all-round woman athlete.

The 19-year-old Texas miss with the boyish build, who has been the sensation of the Olympic Games, running and jumping and throwing roughshod over all opposition, served notice last year in the National championships that she would be heard from in no uncertain manner in the Olympics. This year she won five National titles, tied for another and finished fourth in another event in the Olympic trials and qualified for so many places on the team that they had to limit her field of endeavor in the international games. Her record-breaking feats then and in the Olympic competition that followed have left the athletic world gasping in amazement.

Babe Didrikson

HOW DID SHE do it? Well, in the first place, she has unlimited confidence in her ability. She just goes out and tries and delivers. As a little girl she boxed and wrestled with her brothers, starred in basketball, swimming and diving, copped all of the track and field and tennis medals in sight and now is ambitious to win a National golf championship. She is only 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs only 126 pounds, and says her shoulders are so narrow that she's ashamed of them. There isn't anything in the sports line she won't tackle and she'll bet she can beat the best at any sport after a little practice.

IN OTHER WORDS, she's good and knows it, and doesn't care who knows that she knows it. But you can't blame her for feeling that way when she produces. And she credits all of her ability to the fact that she was tomboy with her brothers in the days when other girls still were playing with dolls. There's enough girl about her that she prefers sewing for diversion. She designs her own clothes. The sports world never has seen her equal for versatility.

LEN MONHEIM, captain of the Pitt track team last spring, recently turned down an offer to play professional baseball for Danville in the Mid-Western League because he has another year in college before he becomes known to the world as Dr. Monheim, and he does not want to forfeit his amateur standing. Monheim has been one of the gamest track men in Pitt's history, and he also is a good boxer and may represent Pitt in the featherweight class in this sport during the coming winter.

ONLY FOUR TIMES in the track and field history of the Olympic Games have there been disqualifications for fouls, such as occurred the other day when L. Lehtinen, of Finland, crossed over on Ralph Hill, of the United States, in the running of the 5,000 meters race, which explains the unwillingness of the authorities to take action. Back in 1906, John J. Daly, of Ireland, blocked off a Swedish runner in a dash event and was disqualified after finishing third. In 1908, in London, Carpenter and two other Americans were running against an Englishman in the 400 meters final and Carpenter was caught cutting in front of the Englishman, whereupon the officials at the finish cut the tape so there could be no winner. It was ruled the race must be rerun without Carpenter, whereupon all of the other American entries were withdrawn and the race was a walkover for the Britons. In the same meet, Dorando, the Italian, was disqualified for being helped across the finish line after he had collapsed in the marathon race and Johnny Hayes, the American, was declared the winner. In 1912, Jim Thorpe, the American Indian, was disqualified on the charge of being a professional after he had won the all-round championship.

Lehtinen should have been disqualified under the rules and the 5,000 meters race rerun, just as last Saturday's 3,000 meters steeplechase should have been rerun after the authorities discovered the course was a lap too long, an error almost inexcusable on the part of men who were supposed to be expert officials.

WHEN THE PIRATES dropped their eighth and ninth straight games yesterday, against the Braves in Boston, following a run of six successive victories over the New York Giants after losing the first game of the eastern trip to the New York team, they set up another unique mark in that they have lost their last four games by a margin of one run, to Brooklyn, 6-5, in 10 innings, in the second game of a doubleheader on Thursday; 2-1, to Brooklyn, Saturday, and 2-1 and 7-6 to Boston yesterday. They were idle on Friday. Their lead has been cut to such an appreciable extent that they will be fortunate to return home in first place, after one of the most disastrous trips in the history of a local pennant-contending team. Before the slump it appeared they couldn't lose any of the close ones—now the shoe is on the other foot.

NEWS OUT OF South Bend is that the Notre Dame Irish are going to be hot again on the gridiron this fall and they are not hiding the fact. One of the developments is said to be that Laurie Vejar showed so much stuff during the spring workouts that he has crowded Jaskwich out of the regular quarterback job. His generalship, passing and blocking are reported to have gladdened the heart of Coach Hunk Anderson, who sees in him an all-America star. Vejar has two more playing years ahead of him.

Notre Dame will have two Carideos on its squad, another Frank, cousin of the all-America quarterback, and Angelo, brother of the first Frank. Angelo is what Ring Lardener would call a 1-4 back, while Frank is a fullback.

DUQUESNE GARDEN will be under new management for hockey, boxing and other sports during the coming winter, according to reports, which have it that Art and Jim Rooney, of the North Side, will be interested in the venture.

(Note—James J. Long, regular conductor of this column, is back from his vacation and will resume writing his comments on sports in tomorrow's issue. During his absence, the column has been conducted by the sports editor.)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8—(AP.)—To a swarthy black-haired son of the Argentine, Juan Carlos Zabala, winner of the classic Olympic Marathon with a record-breaking performance, and to the sweeping triumphs of America's fast-stepping, high-flying boys and girls, go the chief honors of the Olympic track and field championships today.

While the forces of the United States were crowning their team triumph yesterday with amazing flashes of relay speed, adding four new world records to the dizzy whirl in the Olympic Stadium, Zabala was plodding the city streets, wearing down his rivals with machine-like strides that carried him strongly to the finish in the new Olympic record time of 2 hours, 31 minutes, 36 seconds for the route of 26 miles, 385 yards.

BRITISH VET SECOND

The victory of the 20-year-old Argentine, whose swift pace broke the hearts of a half dozen favorites, carried him home 200 yards ahead of Sam Ferris, British veteran. EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: STEAMSHIPS ARE FASTER IN COLD WATER—Since a steamship cannot store enough fresh water within its holds to supply the engines for an ocean voyage, it is necessary to condense the used steam back into water by means of condensers which are cooled by the ocean water. The condenser, to be most efficient, must be kept cool enough to allow free exhaust from the engines. Hence when the ship is sailing through cool waters the condensers are working more perfectly than when they are being cooled by warmer tropical waters that cause slower condensation of the exhaust steam, and a back pressure on the engines. When steamers are powered by turbine engines more efficient condensation of exhaust steam is required than in the case of reciprocating engines. Consequently the warmer sea waters tend to decrease the efficiency of a turbine more than that of any other type of engine.

HELENE FACES TOUGH RACE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—More than even chances of being defeated faced Helene Madison, United States' greatest free style swimmer, as she awaited the finals of the 100-meter race of the tenth Olympic games today.

The reason rested in the fact that a 14-year-old Dutch girl, Willemijntje de Ouden, yesterday eclipsed the world record of 1:09.8 for the 100 meters in winning her semi-final race in 1:07.6.

It was the fourth time in two days the world mark of Albina Osipowich, United States, had been bettered and the Olympic record re-established. Miss Madison won her race in 1:09.9, and, while she was not pressed as hard as the Hollander, she lacked the impressiveness of her chief opponent.

Next to Miss Madison, America's hope for a victory rests with Mrs. Eleanor Garatti Sayville, San Francisco, who placed second in the 1928 games to Miss Osipowich, and one of the quartet of swimmers who bettered the record in preliminary races of the present aquatic championships.

Yesterday's performances, aside from the quickening of the 100-meter record, was marked by the early appearance of strength in the ranks of the Japanese. Yasuji Miyazaki, Nipponese grammar school boy, won the first games championship, taking the men in 58.2 seconds, two-fifths of a second slower than his Olympic records, set Saturday in the semi-finals.

Second was another Japanese sprint swimmer, Tatsugo Kawashi, with Al Schwartz, United States, third. The race was purely a Japan-United States affair, with the little brown men from the Land of the Rising Sun carrying away 17 points, as compared with eight for the Yankees.

Today's program calls for the men's springboard diving, five preliminary heats in the 400-meter free style race and water polo matches between Brazil and Germany and between Hungary and Japan. The United States leads in the round robin play with two victories.

SCHONBLOM NET KING

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., Aug. 8.—James Schonblom, of Bradford, was crowned the Northwest Mountain District tennis champion at DuBois yesterday afternoon by virtue of his victory over Beere, also of Bradford, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5.

PIRATES LOSE DOUBLE BILL TO BRAVES

Floyd Vaughan.

Boston, Aug. 8.—George Gibson and his Pirates today had plenty of time to dwell upon bitter regrets which were the natural emotions of a pennant-seeking ball club that had just dropped its ninth game in succession. This date is open on the Pittsburgh playing card, but the main body of the club journeyed to Portland, Maine, for the purpose of showing in an exhibition game.

Defeat in the first clash with the Braves yesterday was bad enough to swallow, when it is considered that Steve Swetonic pitched a four-hit contest through seven rounds, but the setback which the Buccos had to take in the nightcap was the unkindest cut of all. The league leaders entered the ninth round with a two-run lead and Bill Swift appeared to be the master of the situation when the Buccos ran afoul of Lady Luck and after she has frowned upon them to get them in a jam, the Pirates' kid shortstop, Floyd Vaughan, fumbled again to bring about the defeat of his team. The scores were 2-1 and 7-6.

WORTHINGTON INJURED

Outfielder Bob Worthington, of the Braves, broke his left leg while sliding into third in the last game. He is lost to his club for the remainder of the season.

The Buccos' longest losing streak of the season is within one game of the unbroken string of reverses suffered by the Reds quite early in the campaign. And the poor Reds have been in the cellar since that time, while the Pirates, strange to say, are still riding the crest with a lead of one and one-half games over the Cubs.

The Bears seem to be the worst threat for the Rovers at present, as Charley Grimm appears to have the bounding Bruins in a winning humor. Grimm is much more popular with his players than was Rogers Hornsby.

The wise men of any date will tell you to forget your troubles and look toward the future; but the wise men who play baseball realize that few athletes of the diamond will quickly forget a defeat such as that sustained by the Pirates in the second contest of yesterday. It just isn't being done in diamond society, and the Buccos would not be the hustlers they are if they failed to profit by the post-mortems that are sure to come out of such a disaster.

VAUGHAN STARTS RALLY

The battle was deadlocked as the ninth opened. The unhappy Vaughan must have felt a joyous thrill as he started the last inning with a single. Doubtless he was grinning when Tony Piet walloped the rocket into the leftfield bleachers for a two-run homer that seemed to have the victory ticket attached.

After a bad start, Swift pitched like a champ until the last half of the ninth. With one out in the final inning, the clever Maranville weighed in with his fourth hit of the game. Pirate hopes were higher when Piet gathered in Urbanski's fly. Swift lost his control on Baxter Jordan, new Boston firstsacker, the recruit getting a pass. Dangerous Randy Moore followed with a single that scored Maranville, Jordan rushing to third with the tying run.

Heinie Meine came in to relieve Swift. Berger tapped a roller along the third base line which was allowed to roll as Jordan hustled home. The Pirates claimed the tap was foul, but Umpire Reardon ruled otherwise and the tying run was across, despite the Pirate protest. Leach walked to fill the bases and when Vaughan fumbled Schulmerich's grounder, Moore scored the winning run.

The Buccos greeted Harry Seibold in the first round of this game, the invaders making four runs. Ben Cantwell replaced Seibold. The Braves found Swift for three runs in the same round, Piet's error hurting the Pittsburgh cause. There were no more scoring until the seventh when the home team tied the battle.

BRANDT STRONG

Swetonic's bow to Eddie Brandt in the opener was a sad gesture. The game was runless until the seventh when Worthington doubled to right with two out and Berger on first to score the big outfielder. Dave Barbee batted and singled for Swetonic in the eighth and French went to the mound. Maranville's double and Urbanski's single gave the Braves what proved to be the winning marker.

P. Waner opened the ninth with a walk and Comorosky singled to put runs on second and first. Traynor forced Comorosky as P. Waner advanced. P. Waner scored on Suhr's force play.

GREATEST OLYMPIC MEET DOMINATED BY AMERICANS

BAUSCH'S WIN IN DECATHLON BIG UPSET

By LAWSON ROBERTSON
Head Coach American Olympic Team.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—So far as track and field are concerned, the tenth Olympic games are over. They now take its place in history as the most remarkable meet of all time.

Records were smashed so often and by such tremendous margins, that near the end of the session the winners of events came to feel that they had disgraced themselves if they had not shattered some sort of mark. Since the Olympics were revived, the world has never known so dazzling a gathering of athletes as have competed here.

The United States again maintained its supremacy, but the details vary considerably from those of carnivals that are gone. In the other years we won not so much because we were superlatively great, but because the opposition was inferior. This time we achieved triumphs only because we had under our standard a band of athletes which, as a group, must be reckoned as the most wonderful we have known.

U. S. STARS GREAT

Europe and the Orient sent some very brilliant stars against us, but their radiance was dimmed by the marvelous feats of our home breds. Our boys had to be great—and a little more than great—to gain the major number of the 23 championships that made up the track and fields contests.

Finland, in the beginning, loomed as our chief threat, but the Finns of 1932 did not seem to have the greatness of 1928. They lost the 10,000 meters to Poland, a race which was assumed to be at their mercy. They won the 3,000 meters steeplechase with consummate ease, but they took the 5,000 meters only by an eyelash from an American and only after there had been some conduct during the race that many classified as somewhat worse than unethical.

The biggest upset of the entire meet came when Jim Bausch, of Kansas, won the decathlon, a contest which 999 out of each 1,000 humans had conceded in advance to Achilles Jarvinen, of Finland. The job turned in by Bausch was magnificent, and it brings great joy to the U. S. A. to know that it houses the greatest all-around athlete in the world, and one who climbed to a world record in gaining the laurels.

JAPS SHOW CLASS

Based upon what the Finns showed in 1924 and 1928, it was assumed they would come on to newer and greater victories in 1932. But I am afraid they have slipped back, rather than advanced, and my thought is that Japan, perhaps, will be our chief rival in 1936.

The fact that they now hold the world record for the hop-step-jump and the running broad jump, and finished second in a thrilling pole duel, proves their basic greatness.

England and her colonies showed us some mighty fine athletes. There is a great revival of interest in track and field games throughout the empire, and, if this is maintained through the next four years, we can expect much stouter competition from Great Britain in the track events up to 1,500 meters.

GERMANS DISAPPOINT

I was disappointed in the showing of the Germans. They have concentrated through four years for this most recent Olympic meet. The reports we had from the other side indicated that they might upset many of our victory calculations. Yet, beyond Arthur Jonath, the great sprinter, none of the German track men was really a threat, and in the field the Germans were consistently smothered.

I have seen a part of practically every Olympic meet since 1906. We have had many wonderful ones in the past, but this tenth was so extraordinarily better that there is no comparison. Los Angeles and California hung up a mark of achievement so high that it will be generations before anything ever comes really close to it.

The athletes who specialize in the 3,000-meter steeplechase are fully aware now of the importance of expert lap checkers. A substitute clerk was used here Saturday, and, as a consequence, the boys had to run 7¾ laps instead of 6, or a distance of 3,450 meters, before Iso-Hollo, of Finland, could prove that he was the best man over the hurdles.

I clocked the race, and, when the Finn went over the line an easy winner, I looked at my watch. It registered 10:33, and I came to a sudden realization that somebody had blundered and that the boys had run an extra lap, because the record time, made a few days before, for 3,000 meters was 9:14.

SHOULD RE-RUN RACE

As I interpret the rules, a race must be re-run if there has been faulty measurement of the course. I imagine that Evenson, of England, or McCluskey, of the United States, might have caused a re-run if they had insisted upon their rights under the rules.

But neither boy exercised such privilege, and, as I saw the race, a re-run would not have altered matters. Iso-Hollo, who won with ease, was so much the best of the field that he outclassed it. He led them from the third lap to the end and no one really was close to him at any part of the trip.

Chilly Sauce

By Charles J. Doyle

In the early days of the Pirate drive to the top, Manager George Gibson, broadcasting over the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's station, WCAE, showed a prophetic wisdom, in the light of the distressing happenings in the Pirate family during the past few days. Gibby then declared the Buccos were in front owing to the brilliant play of three youngsters in pivotal positions—Catcher Earl Grace, Shortstop Floyd Vaughan and Second baseman Tony Piet. He also suggested there would be a bad reaction if any of the important trio were to crack.

It is not the intention here to criticize the fine boy who has lost two games for the Buccos in two days. In his vast store of baseball knowledge, Manager Gibson knew it was asking much to expect championship play in a 20-year-old shortstop who had not played, even in a minor league, before last spring.

Grace, as you may have noted, was not in either of yesterday's battles owing to an injured hand. Piet, who has shown as the best young second baseman in either league at this times this year, also has displayed a tendancy to slow down, although the durable Pole smacked out a homer in the ninth inning of yesterday's second game, which should have snapped the Pittsburgh losing streak, and would have done as much but for the uncontrolled elements of the sport.

Youth is magical, but experience is a wonderful asset when the subject in dispute or discussion is the August drive of a major league flag campaign, especially when several clubs are involved. Vaughan is playing the hardest position on the club; he has had less experience than either Piet or Grace and if anybody were destined to falter he sems to be the logical boy.

But neither the Pirates nor their followers should be discouraged; things being as they are. When the Pirates faltered in 1921 stretch they were pressed by a club that had championship qualities written all over it. The Giants of that era won four pennants in a row. There is nothing in the league in 1932 to compare with McGraw's great lineup.

It's a free-for-all, in other words, an the Pirates, still leading by one and one-half games, have a good opportunity to finish in front. Charley Grimm has given the Cubs a new flavor, yet they, too, must depend on a bevy of kids in the clinches. The Quakers are big stuff in the Baker Bowl, but they are not so good on hostile territory. The Braves suffered a rebuff when Bob Worthington, a dangerous hitter and good fielder, broke his leg.

Meantime, it behooves some of the Pirate veterans to "snap into it." Pie Traynor and Adam Comorosky have been very weak since the club put the cleaner on the Giants, and the pitchers, aside from Swetonic and Meine, are anything but impressive. French's failure to hold the Braves in one little inning yesterday proved to be a costly piece of "throwing."

Amateur bouts at Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. Arena, North Side.

Art Lasker vs. Tom Jones and Young Stubley vs. Bob Grosbek, 10 rounds each, Chicago.

Benny McArthur vs. Johnny Cook, 8 rounds, Huntington, W. Va.

Georgie Nichols vs. Tait Littman, 10 rounds, Milwaukee.

Pee Wee Jarrel vs. Spug Myers, 10 rounds, Dayton, O.

Sylvan Rhan vs. Young Ketchel, 10 rounds, Leipersville, Pa.

A professional and an amateur boxing show are scheduled on the North Side of the Allegheny River tonight.

Battling Gizzy meets Chico Cisneros, of Cleveland, in the main bout of the weekly show of the Hickey Park arena in Millvale, while Curley Klaas boxes Buck Crouse, of Natrona, in the heavy-weight feature of a simon-pure card under the auspices of the Twenty-seventh Ward Republican Club in its California avenue arena on the North Side.

Battling Gizzy

Meanwhile the Greenlee Field arena is going ahead with the task of rounding out its card for its Seal Harris-Arthur DeKuh heavyweight headliner in its Hill District arena, on Thursday, and Hickey Park still is plugging away trying to close two "naturals" between George Panka and Frank Novak, heavyweights, and Charley Baxter and Gizzy, lightweights, both of which now have a good chance of being signed. The latter engagement depends considerably upon just how well Gizzy looks against Cisneros after losing two fights in a row, to Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, and Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, at the Meyers Bowl.

Tom Malco, Soho welterweight, comes out of retirement to meet Marty McHale, of McKeesport, in the eight-round semi-final of tonight's Millvale show. Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, boxes Henry Attel, of Girard, O., in the second bout, and Ray Jennings, his Negro heavyweight stablemate, is paired with I. T. Battles, of Erie, in the opener, set for 8:45 o'clock.

Between Rounds

The supporting card at the amateur show tonight includes the following bouts: Bill Nichy vs. Frank Kladdeck, Jimmy Schweitzer vs. Red Davidson, Fleishmah Wilson vs. Walter Zach, Joey Severino vs. Tommy Ryan, Jackie Fields vs. Young Florida and Al Gold vs. Matt Oznak.

Charley Dunn, former Ambridge lightweight puncher, now at the National Military Home in West Los Angeles, is taking in the Olympic games.

Bus service to Hickey Park will augment the street car service beginning with tonight's fights. The busses will leave from Tenth and Liberty and proceed to Sixth street, over the Federal Street Bridge to East Ohio street and out East Ohio street to Millvale, returning after the last bout.

Young Florida, a Seminole Indian, will box Art McGivern in one of the bouts on the next amateur card at the St. Peter's A. A. arena on the North side, Tuesday night of next week.

Irish Kane has a new fighter, Joe Bosak, 1928 Golden Gloves amateur champion, of Chicago, now fighting as a featherweight. He has bested Baby Colins, Georgie Nale, Eddie O'Dowd, Pal Moore and others.

Accompanying Harry Wills and Benny Leonard in comeback campaigns is old Soldier Bartfield, who retired in 1926 after having met all of the leading welterweights and middleweights.

Hard Luck Trails Ex-College Star

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Bad luck which has dogged Robert Wolfe, 22, former Muhlenberg College athlete and sports writer for the Allentown Morning Call, since his college freshman year, struck again over the weekend in the form of lightning.

Wolfe was burned on the left leg by a bolt that brushed him as he took refuge in a pavillion during a storm which broke while he was reporting a baseball game at Jordan Park. He is in Allentown Hospital, painfully if not critically injured.

During his carreer at Muhlenberg Wolfe broke both arms playing basketball, broke them again playing football; broke a leg wrestling and fractured his skull diving. As a result of the skull fracture he suffered amnesia this summer and was missing for several days.

Former Chisox Star Dead in Des Moines

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Ducky Holmes, one of the pioneers of Western League baseball, died at his home in Truro, near here, last night.

Holmes was a great outfielder when he played in the major leagues, ranking among the best fly chasers and hitters. He played several seasons with the Chicago White Sox and later owned and managed Western League clubs at Sioux City and Lincoln, Neb.

letic competition unparalleled in world history.

Juan Zabala, Argentina, 2:31:36.
Samuel Ferris, Great Britain, 2:31:55.
Armas Toivonen, Finland, 2:32:13.
Duncan Wright, Great Britain, 2:32:41.

Andres Hartington-Anderson, Denmark, 2:44:38.
Hans Oldag, U. S. A., 2:47:26.
Clifford Bricker, Canada, 2:47:58.

There has never been a combined athletic show for men and women like this one. They thought much of the "kick" was extracted when the peerless Paavo Nurmi was banished from the Games, two days before they started. But performances from the outset not only were so startling as to make about 400,000 spectators forget all about the great Finn during the week, but sufficiently good as well to knock the last of Nurmi's Olympic marks from the record lists.

Nurmi throughout the week sat in the stands while his native Finland stars were being handed their biggest setbacks in Olympic competition since the war, watching a Polander, Kusocinski, take away the 10,000-meter honors, seeing "Jarring Jim" Bausch, an American, surpass Finland's favored all-round stars in a world record decathlon performance, and an Italian, Beccali, put Finland's champion and the rest of the world's milers to rout in the classic 1,500.

TITLES TO U. S.

Finland won only three individual championships, while the United States celebrated its comeback on home soil and the fastest of all Olympic tracks by romping off with 11 of the 23 men's championships, in addition to five of the six women's title events, for the best all-around Olympic showing the U. S. A. has known in 20 years. The Americans won the men's team championship with the aggregate of 218 points, to Finland's second-place 72. The margin was even wider in the feminine division, where the American girls rolled up 78½ points to 16½ for Germany, in second place.

All told, Olympic records were wiped out completely in 25 of the 29 events for men and women. The only events that escaped the record-smashing process were the hammer throw, broad jump and high jump, besides the 50,000-meter walk, a new event, for which the time must stand at least as a new Olympic standard. World records were surpassed in 13 events, including all six of the women's contests, and equaled in three others.

RELAY MARKS FALL

Bill Carr, whose 400 meter triumph over Ben Eastman in the world record time of 46.2 seconds was one of the great achievements of the week, contributed to the final whirl yesterday. With a running start, on the anchor leg of the 1600 meter relay, he duplicated his record time to help the Americans beat Great Britain, best of five rivals, and lower their own world record to 3 minutes, 8.2 seconds.

Carr's mates in this record-busting four-lap journey were Ivan Fuqua, of Indiana; Ed Ablowich, of Southern California, and Karl Warner, of Yale, who ran their 400 meter tricks, respectively, in 47.1, 47.6 and 47.3 seconds.

The American 400-meter quartet, consisting of Bob Kiesel, Emmett Toppino, Hector Dyer and Frank Wykoff, all four of whom were shut out of the individual sprint forces, redeemed themselves by winning their relay event in 40 seconds flat, likewise knocking their own best time, as well as all other records, into the discard. These fliers beat Germany's highly rated quartet by 10 yards.

Babe Didrikson, the remarkable Texas girl athlete, failed to achieve her goal of three individual championships and as many world records, when she was defeated in the high jump finals by her teammate, Jean Shiley, of Philadelphia. Nevertheless Miss Didrikson was the sensation of the women's athletics, triumphing in the javelin and 80-meter hurdles and finishing second in the high jump.

MISS SHILEY WINS

Miss Shiley cleared the new world-record height of 5 feet 5¼ inches yesterday to win. Miss Didrickson, in second place at 5-5, also was well over the former world mark.

Meanwhile the American girl sprinters wound up the program by gaining a close victory over Canada in the world-record time of 47 seconds flat for their 400-meter relay.

Babe Satisfied With Two Titles

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Although Babe Didrikson, the one-girl track team from Texas, failed to realize her ambition of winning three Olympic championships, she has not lost a bit of her self-confidence.

"I jumped as high as she did, or higher," she said when asked what she thought of the judges' decision giving Jean Shiley, the Temple University (Philadelphia) girl, the Olympic championship in the high jump.

The judges ruled that Babe, by diving over the cross-bar, disqualified herself as she should have gone over feet first. She said:

"No one ever told me not to dive, but I have no complaints. I am glad Jean won."

Miss Didrikson previously had won the javelin throw and the 80-meter hurdles by establishing world records in both events.

Don Elder Victor In Sharon Race

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 8.—Overcoming a jinx which had followed him in previous starts, Don Elder, of Warren, O., won the 50-mile semi-stock car race yesterday at Sharon speedway. His time was 53 minutes and 36 seconds.

After Jess Loper, Greenville, was forced out on the twenty-fifth lap with a bad wheel, Elder took the lead and was never headed. Mike Klapak, Warren, drove a nice race to gain second place from Floyd Dieger, Sharon, after the latter held that position until the forty-fifth mile. Jack Lanahan, Masury, O., finished fourth.

Bob Sallia, Cleveland, driver, suffered injuries to his shoulder when his car turned over during a trial spin in the morning.

Sandlot baseball followers of the district were mourning today the passing of an outstanding baseball star, Paddy Needham, former crack infielder of the Pitcairn, Wilmerding and Homewood clubs, who died Saturay evening in St. Francis Hospital.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at St. Michaels Roman Catholic Church, Pitcairn.

Twenty-one teams will compete in the local elimination tournament for the right to represent Pittsburgh in the National Baseball Federation championship tourney in Dayton, O., September 17. First round games are to be completed by August 13; second round by August 20, and third round by August 27.

GOODWIN VICTOR

LEWISTON HEIGHTS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A 35-foot putt on the thirty-eighth green yesterday won the state amateur crown for Tommy Goodwin, 19-year-old Metropolitan area golfer. Playing against Paul Hyde, 44-year-old veteran from Buffalo, the New York youngster overcame a dormie two handicap in the 36-hole final to go ahead and win on the second extra hole.

LOUGHMAN ADVANCES

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—Sam Loughman, star pitcher of the Amity Club of the Washington County League, has been signed by Cumberland of the Middle Atlantic League. Manager Leo Mackey completed negotiations yesterday.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8. — Unless they fill the official baseball with rock salt, it looks like Jimmy Foxx will pump more than 60 over the ramparts this year. In fact, the Keeper of the Seal and Records, Mr. Ruth, is already putting a new sweatband in his crown and having the silk lining initialed J. F.

Nick Altrock

With more than 40 to his credit, Jamesy is now entitled to spell his name Foxxxx and by the end of the season it should be written Foxxxxxx.

Well, folks, when Ruth battered out his five dozen homers I thought that mark would stand for all time, just like I thought I was getting in on the ground floor when I bought U. S. Steel at 245. It goes to show you never can tell.

GERMANY SEEN RETURNING TO MONARCHY

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Despite denials from every official quarter, there is increasing evidence that the world will awake some morning about a year from now and find that Germany has again become a monarchy.

The government denies any restoration plans for obvious and natural reasons.

But there are strong indications that Lieut. Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, "mystery man" of Chancellor Franz von Papen's cabinet and the present power behind the throne, is working with all the force at his command toward a restoration of the Hohenzollerns.

DESIRE OF PEOPLE

In the present state of German politics, it may safely be said that Von Schleicher's aims represent the will of the Reich. He is credited with knowing, better than any other man, what the German people want in their present state of flux.

Therefore, if Von Schleicher is working for a restoration, it follows as a natural sequence that this may represent the desire of the German people.

There are many who will oppose the Hohenzollerns, just as they did in the days when the German empire was in its glory. But by and large, there are indications that the German people as a whole would welcome them back again.

Von Schleicher's plans, it is believed, envisage recreation of a united German empire, with the Hohenzollerns on the Prussian throne and princelings such as Rupprecht restored in Bavaria and the other states of the Reich.

HINDENBURG MAY QUIT

There are rumors that President von Hindenburg will set the monarchical ball a-rolling on his eighty-fifth birthday in October. At this time, the rumors say, the aged President will issue a proclamation saying he has fulfilled his great mission by re-establishing a nationalistic government and feels he is entitled to spend the rest of his life in peaceful seclusion.

Thereupon, according to this version, the Reichstag will technically appoint a "temporory President" who will in reality be a regent for former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm. The restoration, with Friedrich Wilhelm on the throne at Potsdam, would occur next spring.

BAR SALES BIG IN SAXONBURG

SAXONBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—Residents of Saxonburg have proved that they like their beer.

A survey of near beer sales in the old Muder bar, which was reopened during the town's seven-day centennial celebration last week, today showed that more than 10,000 bottles of the beverage had been sold.

What is more, the residents of the community are going to fight for the return of real beer.

John E. Muder, owner of the bar and chairman of the centennial celebration today said:

"More than 10,000 bottles of near beer were sold in this bar during the centennial. We Germans like our beer and we are going to fight for the return of the real stuff."

Pitched Ball Kills Scranton Player

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Struck by a pitched ball during a baseball game Saturday, Seymour Holly, 18, member of the Jackson Street Baptist Church club, died today of a brain hemorrhage.

Holly did not appear to be seriously hurt and continued in the game. He attended church yesterday, but suffered a relapse last night.

County Heads in Huff Over Bridges, Sprigle

McGovern, Mansfield Score Span Work, Barr Hits Bureau

The three County Commissioners, in a critical mood today, fished around in the Department of Highways and each came up with a separate and juicy catch.

Commissioners C. C. McGovern and William D. Mansfield chose bridges to criticize. Commissioner C. M. Barr harped on the entire department.

The attack started when V. R. Covell, chief engineer, explained that a bill due the county from the Union Railroad had been mislaid.

Barr:

"The department's inefficient. If it's not right, I think it's time for a change."

McGovern:

"The West End-North Side Bridge is a first class blunder. It cost $499,000 more than the estimate. I could send down to the Western Union and get a couple of messengers who could do better than that."

Mansfield:

"The Boston Bridge was practically finished last fall but it won't be opened till this fall."

Director's Naming of Substitute Angers Commissioners

Ray Sprigle, former newspaperman, who receives $8,000 a year as the county's Director of Property and Supplies, was in Arizona today and his bosses—Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr—seemed in a huff.

When Sprigle departed on his vacation he told David Roberts, an assistant, to run the department.

But apparently that didn't appeal to Barr and McGovern—when they found out about it. For today Barr presented and McGovern okayed a motion delegating Leo Riordan, county investigator, to substitute for Sprigle.

Barr made convincing just how he feels about it when he added to the motion a rider which specifies that no director shall depart without asking the Commissioners about a substitute.

When the motion was presented McGovern, who gave Sprigle his job, gave voice to this cryptic remark:

"Who's running out on us after being in six months?"

RIFLES GUARD PRECIOUS CROP

BLUE RIDGE, Ga., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Guards, armed with the rifles their fathers once used to stand off "revenooers," guard today the isolated ginseng farms scattered through the backlands of the Georgia and Carolina mountains.

They are making sure these days, that no interlopers molest their precious root crop for which exporters are paying $7 a pound and as high as $500 a bushel for the seed.

For ginseng, called colloquially "sang," is under cultivation for the first time and its growers are taking no chances of losing their monopoly on the product. The Chinese, who furnish a steady market for the herb, consider it of the highest medicinal value.

Sullivan County officers said they believed the fire was set as part of a campaign against operation of nonunion mines, which culminated last week in a pitched battle between miners and pickets at the Dixie Bee mine, in which one man was killed.

ATHENS, O., Aug. 7.—(AP.)—The roar of another dynamite blast in the strike-ridden coal fields of Athens County still ringing in their ears, indignant citizens today announced formation of a vigilance committee to combat "this reign of terror and sabotage."

FOOD ORDER 'BOOSTER' FREED WITH BLESSING

COUNTY BALKS AT 'TRICK' PURCHASE

Second-Hand Tractors Sold as New, Say Commissioners

The County Commissioners today rescinded their purchase of two five-year-old road maintenance machines after they charged they had been tricked into buying the tractors without knowing they were second hand.

An investigation was ordered and the Commissioners agreed to witness a demonstration of the scraping machines by the Henry Tranter Manufacturing Company, from whom they were ordered bought at $2,500 for the two. The Good Roads Machinery Company had bid $1,915 and the Beckwith Machinery Company, $1,980.

WOODSIDE BALKS

Controller R. G. Woodside, in a letter returning the contract without his approval, disclosed that one of the Tranter machines is in a shed in Connoquenessing Township, Butler County, and the other in a warehouse in Cambria County.

L. F. Bechtel, chief engineer of the County Highways Department, who with Director F. J. Chester, recommended purchase of the Tranter tractor, declared they could do work no other machine could do.

Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, after listening to Bechtel, said:

"I voted for that contract and never knew they were anything but new machines. I voted under a misapprehension and I want to rescind my action."

MOTION CARRIED

Chairman C. C. McGovern seconded the motion, which was carried as Commissioner C. M. Barr remarked:

"I hold no brief for these machines, but just because the highways department is criticised I am not going to run away. Criticism is not going to scare me a bit. If Mr. Bechtel is right, I am for backing the department."

McGovern declared:

"If I had known these machines had lain in a shed for five years I would have asked a lot of questions. If they are what we need, I will vote again to buy them. I am not running away from anything, either."

Mansfield declared:

"We bought these machines on trick specifications."

McGovern said:

"The Controller for the first time has perked up. He let the $240,000 Shade Run Bridge go. He let everything else go, but now when it comes to buying a piece of machinery he wakes up.

"I know this machinery business is a racket. I know some of the big machinery companies have been paying officials of this county and boroughs and townships. That is not going to enter into this administration."

Tranter explained that one of the tractors had been demonstrated in Butler County and the other at Gettysburg. He agreed to demonstrate them in South Park.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 8. To the Editor of Sun-Telegraph:

Been telling you for a year what these Republicans would do with that market just in time to knock the poor inoffensive Democrats out of their hard earned votes in November. Now they are all just a-buying and selling among themselves. In stocks that haven't shown a cent of increased earning power. That shows the thing is kinder "cockeyed." The earnings should come first and then the raise in price of the stock. Like everything that is pre-arranged, it's being kinder overdone. As dumb as we are we know we can't get prosperous that quick. But one good thing about it all is that it might have a lasting result. But don't forget the original idea of it was to beat the poor old Democrats! Who never did anybody any harm in their lives. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

HOLDUP VICTIM DAZED, KILLED BY AUTO

Man Shot in Battle With Thieves, Two Suspects Seized

Deputy coroners and county detectives today were checking a report that Ellis Dorday, 50, of 5135 Lytle street, fatally injured when he was struck by a machine in the Mt. Troy road, was first attacked by a robber.

Dorday, according to the report, was dazed by a blow from the robber and did not see the machine, driven by John Meyers, of 143 Lowrie street, which struck him. Meyers gave bond and was to appear at a coroner's inquest.

At the Dorday home relatives said he went to the North Side to visit friends. He had $20 with him when he left, but after his death in Allegheny General Hospital only 10 cents were found in his pocket. Witnesses said the man was walking in his stockings and was carrying his shoes when he was struck with the machine.

Joseph Baker, 52, Negro, of 327 Second street, Freeport, was in South Side Hospital with two gunshot wounds of the body, received, police said, when he resisted two holdupmen in Steuben street. Frank White, of Nashville, Tenn., and Julian Williams, of Sandusky, O., both Negroes, were being held at West End Police Station as suspects, police said.

Robbery of a West Liberty avenue, Dormont, chain grocery store was declared cleared today by Police Chief Ralph Miller with the arrest early yesterday of Harry Arms, 23, who gave his address as the Merchants' Hotel.

Chief Miller said Arms admitted robbery of the West Liberty avenue store July 29.

PRISONER FAILS AT JAILBREAK

Villa Pando, 28, being held in Penn avenue station as a suspicious person was to explain to a magistrate today an attempted jail-break in which he tried to strike Lieut. J. R. Lynch with an angle iron, police said.

Pando, being held while police check his record in other cities, wedged the iron between his cell door and the jam so that the lock would not catch, according to police.

Walking from his cell during the absence of the cell sergeant, he dashed for the main door of the cell room when Lynch saw him. He struck at Lynch with the iron as the lieutenant slammed the cell room door shut, police said.

5 JOBLESS MEN BUILD HOMES

A jobless Pittsburgh waiter and four unemployed Carnegie Tech architect graduates have found novel ways to keep busy—the former by building an antique home in Allison Park and the latter a modern dwelling in the exclusive Fox Chapel district.

With improvised tools and boards hewn from native timber, Frank Zickes, 50, the waiter, in six months expects to see the completion of the six-room home he is building in a wooded section of Allison Park.

AIDED BY FAMILY

When adversity struck, Zickes took his wife and 20-year-old stepson to a two-room shanty on an acre of ground given him by Frank Tupper, Allison Park dairyman.

A year ago Zickes started building the home. Its basement was made of stones, mud and hay. Next came the sidewalls fashioned of three-inch boards hewn by homemade instruments and grooved by hand. Not a nail is being used in construction.

ARCHITECTS BUSY

Novel, by contrast, is the six-room residence being erected in Valley Drive road, near Aspinwall, by Paul Schell, 26, 600 South Negley avenue; Charles H. Stott, 26, 5457 Broad street; Ulrich Schoenberger, 27, of North Craig street, and John H. Barr, 25, of Wallingford street.

They are using modern materials, furnished them on credit, according to Frederick C. Sauer, president of the Aspinwall Delafield Real Estate Company, who said the building will be offered for sale, the profits going to its builders.

Change in Garbage System Would Mean Saving to Taxpayers

Possibilities for big savings exist in the city garbage and rubbish disposal contract which last year amounted to $1,805,190, about 6¼ per cent of the city budget.

This year there is a noticeable decline in the quantity of garbage and rubbish being collected. Food is too precious to be wasted and property that might have been classed as rubbish in the boom times is being patched up and used.

Even so, the city will spend more than $1,600,000 this year with the American Reduction Company and the Allegheny Garbage Company for collecting and disposing of garbage and rubbish.

If these contracts were put on a long term basis and competition encouraged, it is not too much to expect that the Mayor and Council would find that they have saved $750,000 a year, or one mill in taxes, for the citizens of Pittsburgh.

In contrast to the listless method of letting an annual contract some time near the end of the year, the city of Boston recently opened bids for garbage and rubbish disposal on both a five-year and a 10-year basis. The bids were opened six months in advance.

Boston, which in 1931 disposed of 70,900 tons of garbage as compared with 102,118 tons handled in Pittsburgh, had six bidders and was rewarded with a low bid on the 10-year contract of $378,000 a year. On the five-year contract, the low bid of $450,000 a year. Those bids also include the removal of 260,000 tons of rubbish and ashes.

The garbage in Boston is collected the same as in Pittsburgh and is reduced in a plant and not dumped at sea. Although slightly more than 30 per cent more garbage is collected here, it is possible to double Boston's low bid and still save a mill of taxes here.

The truth of the matter is that the outlay of capital in trucks and incinerating plants required to handle garbage and rubbish here is so large that it is too dangerous to try it on a one-year contract. This means that the bidders already in the saddle will keep on handling the contract forever unless the system is changed.

For many years the American Reduction Company has handled the garbage business in Pittsburgh proper. This in spite of the fact that three years ago, the then Controller Henry Oliver Evans found that the company was adding improper costs to its bill, and was able to force the company in court to give back $375,000.

The Allegheny Garbage Company has collected the garbage and rubbish on the North Side for many years.

Both these companies have had little or no competition. The Modern Service Company, low bidder in the last two years, was ruled out because it was not considered responsible. American Reduction's prices of $6.58 per ton for garbage and $7.82 per ton for rubbish have not changed for three years. Prior to that they were on a cost plus contract, the abuse of which caused the city suit against them.

The Allegheny Garbage Company, also bidding a flat rate, last year raised their price per ton of garbage $1 to $7.95 and reduced their price on rubbish 80 cents to $7.02 per ton.

The city of Cincinnati solved the problem in a different way by taking over its own collection and disposal and saving $100,000 last year in spite of large write-offs to cover part of the investment in three new incinerating plants.

ELIMINATE WASTE IN GOVERNMENT

HUSBAND SHOT BY WIFE

Anthony Aleck, 49, of Renova street, was in the Montefiore Hospital today with a bullet in his foot. His wife, Mary, 23, who said she shot him because she thought he was going to beat her, was free on her own recognizance pending her husband's discharge from the hospital.

Arraigned in Morals Court yesterday, Mrs. Aleck told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones that she and her husband had been quarreling since their marriage four years ago. He struck her many times, she said, and when the last argument started, she shot him to prevent him from again beating her, according to her testimony.

Marlatt was sent to Allegheny General Hospital, where a head laceration was dressed.

CHARITY GROUP REFUSES TO PROSECUTE

Didn't Intend to Cheat, Says Aged Protector Of Hungry Children

Leopold Rivinski, 67, of 3406 Ligonier street, jailed for five days on the charge of raising $2 relief orders to $7 to keep his four children and 16 grandchildren from starving, was freed today in Penn Avenue Police Court.

The aged man told Magistrate J. J. O'Connor:

"I did not intend to cheat the relief people. I intended to go to work if I could find it and pay back every penny. I am sorry and will not do it again."

Magistrate O'Connor said:

"I know how it is when a man is rearing a family. I have 10 children myself. You have been in jail five days and I think the law is satisfied. The Welfare authorities do not wish to press this case. So, good luck to you and God bless you. You are discharged."

Mrs. Margaret Joedk, of Verona street, Glassport, daughter of Rivinski, and mother of several of the grandchildren in whose behalf he altered the orders, wept throughout the hearing. Miss Ruth Sawders, of the Catholic Charities said the Rivinski case had been investigated and that no prosecution was urged.

JAPS TIGHTEN MANCHU GRIP

TOKIO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—In accordance with the government's decision to unify authority in Manchuria under an army commander with wide powers, Gen. Nobuyoshio Muto was installed today as commander in chief of the Japanese forces in Manchuria.

At the same time he was named "ambassador on special mission" to Manchuria, and appointed governor general of the Kwantung leased territory.

The ambassadorial rank makes him the head of all the Japanese consulates in Manchuria and this country's spokesman in dealing with the Manchukuo regime.

The investiture occurred in the presence of the emperor at the sovereign's summer palace at Nasu, north of Tokio.

As head of the armies in Manchuria, a force which is estimated at 50,000 men, Gen. Muto replaces Gen. Shiauru Honjo, conqueror of Manchuria, who is returning to Japan to become a member of the supreme war council.

Farmer Plants Wheat, But He Gets Flowers

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Took a trip through the pine belt this week-end and met a farmer who wondered what became of the old-fashioned banks that only closed Sundays and legal holidays.

He seemed glad that the government is coming to his aid. But he was none too optimistic about it as he has lost plenty of swimming lessons in the mail.

He needs about eight hundred dollars to paint his barns. Getting so cows won't go into a building unless it looks like a movie palace.

The old tractor has shed its second growth of gears and that's a couple hundred more. He don't want any more free government seeds because they taste bad in his tobacco.

Says he is a corn and wheat farmer but the last package of free seeds he got from his congressman put him in the rhododendren business.

Claims that if he can only hold out until he gets the Reconstruction Finance money it will certainly help his grandchildren. He's only got one son and he ain't going to be married until next year.

EMPTYING SACKS OF BALLOTS AT SUN-TELEGRAPH OFFICE

First Tabulation of Returns Under Way

Although still a mystery, a fair indication of the trend of sentiment of the American public may be had in the first results to be announced soon in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Hundreds of replies are being received daily by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, one of the 18 regional poll headquarters. They are part of the more than 3,500,000 cards sent to voters in every part of the United States. These replies, sent to national headquarters at Washington, are now being tabulated and according to word from there, the first tabulation is about ready for publication.

A total of 312,296 ballots were sent to Pennsylvania voters, 208,198 to men and 104,098 to women.

After the first announcement, a daily table will give a line not only on the popular vote to be expected in November for the respective candidates, but also will forecast the alignment of the electoral vote, which in the final analysis is the deciding factor.

SLEUTH ROBBED, SUSPECT HELD

David Harvard, 34, came to town as a magazine salesman, graduated to beating up and robbing railroad detectives, then postgraduated to impersonations of prohibition agents, according to the police.

Harvard was arrested when shopkeepers in the 1100 and 1200 blocks of Penn avenue complained that he offered for sale protection from booze raids.

Then the police reported finding on his person the driver's license, the watch and the handcuffs of Kenneth P. Davies, a Pennsylvania Railroad detective. And Davies identified him as the assailant who beat and robbed him when Davies was in the act of arresting the man.

Harvard was held for court by Magistrate J. J. O'Connor in Penn Avenue Police Court today.

San Francisco Opera Dedication Slated

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—San Francisco's new $6,000,000 opera house, the first and only municipally owned opera house in the United States, will be formally dedicated next month as a war memorial and will be opened Saturday, October 15, with performance of Puccini's lyric drama, "Tosca."

Nephew of Egypt's King Dies in France

TOULOUSE, France, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Prince Kemal Ed Din Hussein, nephew of the King of Egypt, who renounced his succession to the throne in 1917, died yesterday. He was 57 years old.

The prince was a former commander in the Egyptian army.

Morrow-Sheppard Reunion Planned

Descendants from throughout the country are expected to attend the Morrow-Sheppard-Moore family reunion Sunday at Maple View Park, near Canonsburg, according to Secretary T. B. Cowan. The Morrow-Sheppard families came to this country in 1756.

SHANNON URGED AS GUARD HEAD

MT. GRETNA, Pa., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Approximately 1,500 wartime members of the 28th Division ended their annual reunion here yesterday with election of officers and adoption of a resolution urging that Gov. Pinchot appoint Brig. Gen. Edward Shannon as next commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

Members of the society of the 28th Division explained the resolution was prompted by rumors that Smedley D. Butler, retired Marine general, might be appointed the guard's commander.

Maj. Gen. William G. Price, Jr., of Chester, was elected president of the society. Other officers elected are: Maj. John Shenkel, of Pittsburgh, first vice president; Brig. Gen. Shannon, second vice president; Col. Frederick Pusey, of Philadelphia, third vice president; Frederick Warner, of Philadelphia, secretary; T. O. Van Allen, of Harrisburg, treasurer; Charles Schall, of Wayne, chaplain; A. W. Nerian, of Pittsburgh, sergeant-at-arms, and W. B. Windle, of Pittsburgh, judge advocate general.

The veterans held a memorial service for their deceased comrades.

JAIL 2 IN THRIFT GARDEN THEFT

Two men are in County Jail charged with larceny as the result of the activities of a vigilance committee guarding the ripening vegetables in the thrift gardens on the Mackintosh Hemphill property, Freeport road, O'Hara township.

They are Sam Sanchez, of 24 Bridge street, Sharpsburg, and Luna John, of 105 Fifth street, Sharpsburg, both Mexicans.

The men were held for court by Justice of the Peace Charles J. Reitz, of Oakmont, on informations made by members of a vigilance committee who said they caught the two men raiding the thrift gardens early Saturday morning.

Both men have gardens of their own in the same plot, it was charged, but were helping themselves to the choice vegetables of their neighbors. Thrift garden officials are making efforts to have the guards on the adjoining workhouse property keep an eye on the gardens at night.

STEWARD CITES DEMANDS FOR SIMPLE FOOD

Simple food demands have followed in the wake of business and financial worries, as indicated by a la carte service of hotels and finer restaurants dropping 70 per cent, Raymond J. Kief, of Cleveland, national president of the International Stewards' Association, said today as members gathered in the William Penn Hotel for their annual convention.

America's taste for rich entertaining and fine parties will return, according to Kief, when the business world improves. He explained:

"Plain food is in demand, with the guest wanting to know what the meal will cost. This has eliminated 70 per cent of the a la carte service. Hotels and restaurants must list a fixed price and combinations to hold the guests. While the outside catering business for big parties has dropped off, too, women have gained a permanent place in the restaurant field through establishing fine tea rooms. The secret of the successful has been their ability to combine the old French cuisine with American ideals."

The convention opened for three day sessions. George S. Lehner, president of the local association, presided at the first session, and the address of welcome was by Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. Today's sessions were occupied by appointments and reports. A reception and dance will be held tonight. J. A. Foley, of Pittsburgh, is honorary secretary and director.

SITES STUDIED BY HOME LOAN BANKERS

Board, Two Days Old, Speeds Work of Aiding Owners

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The two-day old Home Loan Bank board already is shaping the machinery necessary to get financial aid to home owners.

Preliminary conferences among those of the five board members now in the capital continued today with Franklin W. Fort, New Jersey Republican, chairman, planning the first formal meeting tomorrow. Meanwhile, he talked with Nathan Adams, Dallas Democrat and prominent banker in the southwest, and Dr. John Gries, Rosewood, O., Republican, economist, about the problem of picking sites for the eight to 12 banks they will establish.

FINANCIAL CENTERS

That constituted one of their immediate and essential tasks. There was some discussion of the 12 cities where Federal Reserve banks operate. The fact that these places already are recognized financial centers drew some comment. But that fact alone, it was indicated, would not be the only one considered.

Then, too, should the directors decide to establish only eight banks at first, at least four of the Federal Reserve cities would have to be passed up.

Fort expects the other two directors appointed Saturday by President Hoover—subject to confirmation by Congress in December—to be present tomorrow. These are: H. Morton Bodfish, Chicago Democrat and executive manager of the United States Building and Loan League, and William E. Best, Pittsburgh Republican, president of the league.

DIRECTORS STUDIED

Other problems confront them. They will give some consideration to men available to head the 11 directors of each of the system banks. They will think about the minimum capitalization of each bank, which, under the law, must be $5,000,000. Larger institutions are likely to be set up in some places.

The board members hope the initial shares, to be sold at $100 par value, can be distributed without too heavy a claim upon the $125,000,000 available for federal subscription through the Reconstruction corporation.

And, above all, they want to get the system speedily established so it can lend money to home owners who have good security but cannot borrow elsewhere.

THEFT SUSPECT SEIZED IN CHASE

Captured after a chase through North Side by police, who say he was detected in the act of looting the C. M. Block clothing store at 200 Federal street, Charles Kelly, 200 Federal street, Charles Kelley, 27, of Johnstown, was fined $25 or 30 days in North Side Police Court today. Kelley told police he came to Pittsburgh a few days ago from Ideal Park, Johnstown, where the bonus seeking veterans were camped. He said he operated a refreshment stand at the park.

Joseph Richardson, who lives in the Wolfendale Hotel, opposite the store, telephoned police, informing them that someone was looting the establishment. As they approached the store, Kelley, police said, ran down Federal street and into Lacock street, where he was captured. Police stated that he had a quantity of merchandise in his possession when taken prisoner.

SHAW LAUGHS AT CRITICS

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Adverse London criticisms of George Bernard Shaw's new play "Too True to Be Good," gave the veteran playwright a Shavian laugh today. He said:

"As usual the majority of the critics have not been equal to the occasion. I cannot help being about 50 years ahead of them."

The play was first seen in England at Malvern festival Saturday. The critics' views were typified by the criticism of the Sunday Express, which said:

"It is Shaw's despairing effort to be modern and it puts him, a dusty relic, forever on the shelf."

WOMAN ADMITS SLAYING KIN

MONESSEN, Pa., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Catherine Dubinsky, 28, wife of Stephen Dubinsky, today admitted the fatal stabbing her brother-in-law, George Dubinsky, 26, of Monessen, during a quarrel in the Dubinsky home yesterday, police announced.

Coroner H. A. McMurray said libs by Dubinsky at Mrs. Dubinsky's housekeeping during a drinking party by the husband, wife and brother-in-law led to a scuffle in which George was stabbed with a butcher knife.

He walked to the front porch, where he fell dead.

Stephen Dubinsky, the husband, was arrested with his wife, but released when he convinced authorities he was asleep in an adjoining room, Coroner McMurray said.

CASHIER SPURNS BOGUS BILL

Two young men who, police believe, sought to have a counterfeit $20 bill cashed in the Islay Dairy Store, at 2032 Murray avenue early today, were disappointed by an observing cashier. The pair made a small purchase and tendered the bill in payment.

The cashier looked at the money, said he believed it to be no good. One of the men grabbed the bill and the pair ran from the store.

New U. S. Quarters Confuse Chicago Merchants

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Times being what they are, it has taken a formal pronunciamento from the Federal Reserve Bank to put the stamp of authenticity on a United States coin.

It was the new Washington quarters that caused the trouble. Some storekeepers refused to accept them yesterday when they first began to trickle through the tills of the Loop, and not until statements from Federal Reserve officers were printed by the newspapers did the shopmen accept them willingly.

About 600,000 of the new coins, struck as part of the Washington bicentennial, have been distributed in the seventh reserve district.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

RAILS ARE KEY TO BUSINESS SAYS RUGG

Advocating wide use of funds provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in a comprehensive program to rehabilitate the country's transportation facilities, W. S. Rugg, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, stated that such action would do more to stimulate general business than any other activity. Mr. Rugg spoke from Station KDKA.

He declared that the great national objective of today, transcending in importance all other social and economic requirements, is the stimulation of general business and the putting back to work our unemployed millions. Personal advancement and selfish ambition must give way to cooperative effort. America at work will annihilate depression and carry us onward and upward to new heights of social, industrial and economic supremacy.

NO NEW INDUSTRY

In the past, to tide us over and carry us to greater industrial heights, new industries have been brought to life and established. Today, lack of public confidence—the basis of credit—and the limited purchasing power of the individual made the ready acceptance and promotion of new things an economic impossibility. For instance, television and air conditioning, the most promising of the new industries, must mark time until individual purchasing power increases, Mr. Rugg stated.

Therefore, there being no new industry to do a real job of economic reconstruction, we must fall back on rehabilitation of what we have, in his opinion. Mr. Rugg said:

"The rehabilitation of transportation will, far greater than any other activity, stimulate general business and enable it to re-establish itself as the result of the increased movement of goods and people."

GOVERNMENT TO HELP

Mr. Rugg declared that it is gratifying to note from the public press that Secretary Mills of the Treasury, and Secretary Lamont, of Agriculture, have offered a program, now being considered by rail executives, to use Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds for maintenance and reconstruction of equipment and way. They estimate that approximately 100,000 men in the railway and equipment supply manufacture can be put to work by this means. Millions more can be restored to their legitimate gainful occupation by the stimulus that normal railroad buying can give to general business.

One of the Coolest Spots in Town!

MISS RUTH MORGAN MISS HELEN WANDER

PACKING PLANT COOLEST SPOT IN CITY

One of the coolest spots in Pittsburgh these hot summer days is to be found in the large modern coolers located in the Fried & Reineman Packing Company, North Side, Pittsburgh. Regardless of the sweltering temperature outside or within the plant, in the coolers a temperature of 34 degrees is constantly maintained.

In spite of this low temperature, no moisture is found on the walls. The air is drawn in from the outside, washed and cooled and circulated through sprays of water. The coolers, which accommodate 150 cattle, 400 lambs and 300 calves, were installed a year and a half ago for the protection of Pittsburgh meat consumers during hot weather, according to Walter Reineman. He said:

"These coolers are equipped with individual refrigeration units that automatically maintain the proper temperature and degree of humidity. These devices are the newest developments in the meat packing industry."

Nearly 35 years ago, Fried & Reineman began supplying the meat industry of Western Pennsylvania from a comparatively small establishment in the Spring Garden district. For the first quarter-century, the company limited its activities to the slaughtering of hogs, manufacturing bolognas and sausage and the distribution of other food products.

During the summer of 1921, operations were moved to present headquarters on East Ohio Street Boulevard, with a property space of six and one-eighth acres. Beef, calves and lambs were added to their line of products. At present 29 varieties of bologna and sausage, more than 25 kinds of cheese, creamery butter, oleomargarine, lard, calf, lamb, beef and hog products are distributed to thousands of retail dealers in Western Pennsylvania under the well-known registered trade-mark, Fort Pitt Brand.

GAIN IN PAPER INDUSTRY IS EXPECTED

Wage and employment surveys just completed in the paper, box board, newspaper and paper box industries disclose a more optimistic feeling than has been indicated for nearly two years, according to W. Clement Moore, business economist.

The majority of the individual concerns reporting have stated that they do not contemplate either further reduction in wages nor curtailed employment.

Twenty-one per cent of all the factories reporting have in mind a considerably increased number of employes during the fall and early winter months.

GAIN EXPECTED

In the paper, box board and paper box industries the data obtained indicates a 27 per cent increase in factory employes for October, November and December with a 9 per cent increase in office personnel.

Reports from the newspaper industry as represented by the great number of small and medium sized publications, indicates no reduction in employment but the possible increase is very small, averaging a 3.8 per cent increase over June 30 figures.

REVENUE HIGHER

Increased revenue is also expected by the leaders in these industries. Forty-one per cent of the replies state that they expect an encouraging increase in business for the balance of the year, the average estimate being approximately 18 per cent, which means that the estimate of increased revenue made by the executives ranged from 20 to 25 per cent over the first six months of the year.

Lone Star Gas Profit Holds At High Level

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

EARNINGS OF LONE Star Gas Corporation in the first six months of 1932 were within $200,000 of meeting dividend requirements on the common stock for a full year. This indicates that the organization is showing better results than in 1931.

Lone Star is on an annual dividend basis of 64 cents a share. To conserve cash, however, this is being paid in a newly created class of 6 per cent convertible preference stock, convertible into common until June 30, 1937, at the rate of seven shares of common for each preferred share.

With 5,451,043 shares outstanding at the close of 1931, annual dividend requirements at the present rate would amount to $3,488,667 a year. Preferred dividends amount to $520,000 a year.

* * *

Earned 75 Cents In Year of 1931

IN THE FULL year of 1931 Lone Star showed net profit after all charges of $4,885,124. After deducting preferred dividends of subsidiaries $4,627,561 remained for the company's own stock. This was equivalent to 75 cents a share on Lone Star's common after deducting its own preferred dividends.

In 1930 net profit after all charges was $6,462,585. After deducting subsidiary preferred dividends, $6,428,936 was left for the stocks of Lone Star. This was equivalent to $1.29 a share after deducting the company's own preferred dividends.

The results for the first half of the present year indicate that the company has excellent prospects for finishing 1932 with better results than those of 1931.

Books New Contract With Power Company

LONE STAR recently was awarded a contract to supply 180,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas a month to be used as fuel by an electric power company in its operating territory. As the load of this plant increases, Lone Star will benefit from increased sales of gas in excess of the contract to this organization.

The company, in common with other corporations in the natural gas business, has suffered from sharply curtailed industrial demand during the depression period as well as a moderate decline in residential consumption. In spite of these factors, however, it has maintained earnings on a fairly stable level. The recent development of new territory has not yet been particularly evident in earnings, although it has tended to compensate for declines in established areas of distribution.

Lone Star is a natural gas producing, transporting and distributing company serving Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex., as well as 270 other communities in Texas and Oklahoma.

The policy of paying common dividends in new preferred stock instead of cash has permitted the company to reduce bank loans contracted to finance expansion in recent years. Between January 1 and the end of May loans were reduced $1,325,000 to $5,077,000. Cash was increased $400,000 to $1,963,000 during this period.

Forbes

Securities Indulge in Somersault

By B. C. FORBES

IN ONE MONTH stock prices have rebounded on an average of 60 per cent, with many showing gains of 100 to 200 per cent, some even 300 per cent.

Mr. Forbes

This demonstrates how quickly and drastically changes can occur in this youthful, mercurial country.

Also, it may contain a warning for retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers who have allowed shelves to become well nigh empty. What has occurred in securities may occur on an impressive scale in commodity and other raw material markets as well as in finished merchandise.

CROAKERS HAVE BEEN dolefully proclaiming that equity securities, meaning shares as distinct from bonds, would never, never regain any real value. Investors were told and re-told to get rid of stocks and to avoid them hereafter as they would the plague. Only bonds had any real value, and most of them were of questionable worth.

Well, the events of the last 30 days have answered the croakers, the chronic pessimists. Those who had sufficient vision, sufficient faith in America, to purchase shares when quotations were unprecedentedly low can today cash in profits of 50 to 300 per cent. Both common and preferred shares have recovered equally sensationally.

Saturday was the most animated day of all on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading boiled. The pace was reminiscent of 1929 boom days.

Stocks, bonds, commodities—everything soared.

IS THIS OUTBURST of optimism merely mid-summer madness?

The writer regards today's price levels for securities and commodities as much saner than the recent low levels.

More. It is inconceivable that the bonds and stocks of sound American corporations will not by and by return to distinctly higher average prices. It is inconceivable that wheat and cotton and other major products of the soil will not by and by sell much higher. It is inconceivable that American copper will long stay around a nickel a pound. It is inconceivable that butter, eggs, beef, hides will long sell so far below normal. It is inconceivable that iron, steel, lead, zinc, rubber, silk will not by and by become worth much more.

This column has repeatedly emphasized that foundations for recovery were being laid. That reflation will materialize cannot well be doubted.

MOST CITY BANKS are now over-supplied with idle funds. Facilities have been provided for expanding credit by the billion. Our gains in gold are rapidly approaching the $100,000,000 mark. The American dollar is rising in international value, portending the gravitation of gold from other countries to the United States.

Leading agricultural commodities have already improved substantially in price. The revelation is made that the Farm Board's colossal accumulation of wheat has been cut down something like 90 per cent, a development of prime importance.

From many points come announcements of important factory activity, involving employment. Evidences multiply that inventories are abnormally low and that even moderate demand cannot be supplied from stock.

Governmental stimulation of bank credit, governmental activities for financing business, real estate, railways, governmental backing of anything and everything calculated to hasten reflation and rehabilitation, all are getting going full blast.

PESSIMISTS DECLAIM, "Washington and Wall street are indulging in a lot of hullabaloo, but where is there expansion in actual trade to justify it?"

Admittedly, betterment in actual business still is negligible. But, betterment in sentiment, betterment in banking and other financial conditions, betterment in bonds, betterment in stocks, betterment in various basic commodities cannot be disputed.

Nor—can it be disputed that betterment in trade will be a logical sequel if these other powerfully helpful trends continue without more than normal periodical reactions.

Imports at Boston Show Marked Gains

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Imports for the past three months at the port of Boston have shown steady increases, W. W. Lufkin, collector, announced in making public the comparative figures.

In May, duties collected were only $699,836. In June they had increased to $792,906 while last month they reached $1,149,709.

Port officials said that to a large extent the imports were raw materials for American manufacture.

Nebraska Urges Highway Patrol

LINCOLN, Neb.—A state-wide petrol of Nebraska highways by a corps of state officers who would act in co-operation with all branches of law enforcement has been recommended by the Nebraska Motor Club. Club officials expressed belief that employment of such a consolidated force would reduce law violations on the highways.

WALL STREET HEARS

That the automobile industry is looking for an upturn in sales this autumn.

That New York correspondents of out-of-town banks are urging the latter to take advantage of recent strength in bonds for liquidation of doubtful holdings.

That some railroad executives are not particularly enthusiastic about the proposed plan for maintenance and equipment loans.

METAL MARKET PRICES UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Copper advanced ⅛ cent in the domestic market to 5⅜ cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley at the end of the week, with some producers holding for 5½ cents and a small tonnage sold at that figure. Better demand was stimulated by firmness abroad, improved export buying reflecting expanding consumption there. In the American market, consumers were bidding for 1933 deliveries, but producers were unwilling to accept forward orders at current levels.

Tin advanced as buying by domestic consumers for immediate and forward positions expanded.

Lead continued to rise as producers maintained a firm attitude. Most branches of the consuming trade were represented in the buying with the demand extending into September needs.

Zinc was firmer in sympathy with other metals as some sellers withdrew and refused to take further orders at current levels.

Demand was moderately active early in the week, but tapered off somewhat later.

Zinc Stocks Rise, Production Lower

Production in July was 14,771 tons, compared with 16,410 in June and 21,365 tons in July, 1931.

Shipments in July totaled 12,896 tons, against 14,958 tons in June and 28,460 tons in July, 1931.

STOCKS PUSH TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The stock market again charged forward, smashing all opposition today, in a display of bullishness which much of Wall street had thought might not be seen again in years.

Securities and commodities again reacted upon each other to their mutual advantage, cotton leading the staples with an uprush of more than $5 a bale. The bond market was firm, but was again overshadowed by the spectacular performance of junior securities.

The stock market was swept by successive waves of profit-taking, but they merely served to interrupt the upsweep of prices. Declines of 1 to 3 in the first half hour were quickly regained, and a similar setback at noon was short lived.

The rails, many of which have already more than doubled in price since the list turned upward a month ago, continued to share the furious advance. In the face of the fact that latest earnings statements showed that the majority of the carriers were failing to earn their fixed charges, and that the latest carloadings reports have failed to reflect important improvement, traders were obviously willing to believe that the determined efforts of the railroad executives to co-operate to reduce their expenditures, together with a brightened prospect of general business improvement in the autumn, justified confidence in the ability of the stronger roads to restore their earning power. Stocks of coal carriers, and some of the roads which expect to have large crops to move, were particularly strong.

The automobile stocks shot upward in their best move in months. While automobile production has recently undergone sharp seasonal curtailment, a number of executives now express the belief that the improved sentiment reflected by the security markets should bring improved autumn business. General Motors reported July sales to American consumers of 32,849 cars, off considerably from 56,987 of June, and less than half the 85,054 of July of last year. Some quarters point out that measures to help commodities, such as the plan of relieving the market of the overhanging Farm Board stock of cotton through a credit arrangement with the mills, should restore agricultural purchasing power and stimulate new automobile buying.

The drop in Homestake Mining was interesting in view of the change in sentiment toward other issues. Gold mining thrives when other industries are depressed, and general prices in terms of gold decline. But as measured by standard indices, wholesale commodity prices have now advanced for seven successive weeks.

WHEAT JUMPS AFTER DROP

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Despite stock market buoyancy and notwithstanding a big decrease of the amount of wheat on ocean passage, grain values turned downward early today. Heavy selling to realize profits for recent buyers of wheat was the dominating factor. Opening 3/8 off to 3/8 up, wheat later underwent material setbacks all around. Corn started unchanged to 5/8 higher, and subsequently receded.

Sudden jumps to much above Saturday's finish followed greatly expanded buying that developed when wheat showed a fall of about a cent. The new rise accompanied soaring of securities, and quickly hoisted wheat 2 cents from the early low point to the highest figures since June 4.

Trading in wheat assumed broad proportions, and individual dealings counted for little. Transient reaction from advances served only to increase commission house purchasing that came from widely distributed sources. Corn and oats swayed with wheat.

Provisions went upward with cereals.

LIGHT COTTON CROP SEEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The Department of Agriculture today forecast a cotton production this year of 11,306,000 bales, which is 5,790,000 less than last years' crop and 3,352,000 below the five-year average.

The difference in this year's crop and last year's on the basis of today's forecast would more than absorb approximately 3,000,000 bales of cotton now held either directly or indirectly by the Farm Board.

The effect of the extremely low production forecast on the possible organization of a syndicate of cotton mill interests reported to be forming with powerful banking support was problematical.

If the departmental forecast materializes, it was said in informed circles today, the necessity of any such buying organization would be eliminated.

In making its prediction the department said prospects for the crop were more uncertain than usual because boll weevils were present in greater numbers than in any year since 1928.

The condition of the crop was given as 65.6 per cent of normal, compared with 74.9 per cent last year and the 10-year average of 66.4 per cent.

Stocks Follow True Form in Failing to Do The Expected

The stock market is running true to form on the current movement in that it has steadfastly refused to do what might be expected on the basis of precedent. Past performance would seem to have called for some measure of correction long since, but reaction such as has occurred has been short-lived and limited in scope. Rather the market appears to have been required to absorb a little more in the way of selling than has developed by way of periodical profit-taking in the course of the day thus far. The amazing recovery quite evidently has been generating its own momentum on the advance, the sheer nature of the rise presumably serving to encourage a growing outside speculative interest.

There has been a better demand of late for bonds than at any time in the past year or longer, according to observers interested in the investment market. There is one significant feature in the current price advance, which is prone to be overlooked by the average observer. That has been the small change which has been recorded in brokers' loans during the upswing last week, brokers' borrowings declined $1,000,000 to a new low despite the broad advance in prices. This is taken to indicate that stocks had been passing into strong hands and that very little of the buying witnessed thus far has been of the weak marginal variety.

Wall street anticipates a number of major news developments this week which may have considerable bearing on investment sentiment. At the top of the news calendar is President Hoover's acceptance speech on Thursday; then the two important railroad conferences, one of the eastern consolidattion scheme and the other between railroad and government authorities respective Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans for putting freight equipment in repair; and finally expected announcement of the formation of the corporation to extend credits for commodity purchases.

Poor's Index of General Business rose to 69.9 in July, according to the preliminary estimate in Poor's "Business and Markets" bulletin. This is the fourth successive monthly rise shown by this index, which started its upturn in April. The rise in July, according to Poor's, "is due mainly to the fact that July is normally a low month. The declines in production in the steel and automobile industries were not so great as seasonally expected. Mail order house sales also declined less than their seasonal index. Electric power moved slightly upward contrary to its seasonal pull. Crude oil production advanced somewhat, in accordance with its seasonal trend."

News that a nitrate cartel has again been formed with an agreement between European and Chilean producers is of primary importance in the rehabilitation of Central Europe. The synthetic nitrate industry employs the largest number of workers in any division of the chemical industry abroad. It was threatened with serious disruption by a possible breakdown of prices that might have come with dumping from Chile if no adjustment had been reached. While no immediate reflection of the agreement is expected in Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, America's largest producer of synthetic sodium nitrate, is apparent, the company will obviously benefit substantially in the long run.

Buying in Cerro de Pasco has sent the stock up from the year's low of 3½ to the current price of around 10. Even at present levels, however, Cerro is selling substantially under the net. At the end of the year current assets totaled $16,725,078, compared to current liabilities of $989,130. Included in current assets, cash and government's totaled around $7,100,000. The company had outstanding 1,122,842 capital shares and no funded debt.

Larry Quarrels With Lurline Over Her Attitude Toward Blondie

CHAPTER XIII.

"Of course, Blondie told me about the store," Larry continued, watching the effect on Lurline. "We've been chatting away . . . she has a lot of charm . . . she's fresh and young . . ."

"Fresh is right!" Lurline almost hissed it.

"Meow! Say, why don't you ask some of the kids out after the show, and I'll get Pratt and Freddie and we'll have some fun."

"Okay, Larry," Lurline said, pleased now and only too ready to forget what had happened. "We'll meet in the speakeasy—you can just put that kid in a cab and send her home!"

"Oh, have a heart—let her come along—she'd love it . . ."

"No! Nothing doing—if she comes—" Lurline was furious now, and could control herself no longer.

"Why not?" asked Larry tauntingly.

"I don't want her, and I won't have her—get me!"

"Say, listen you—don't talk to me like that." The smile left Larry's face and his voice grew firm. "If I want to bring her, I'm going to. You're not running things altogether, you know. You don't own me!" and there was no mistaking what he meant. Lurline threw away all discretion as she said viciously:

"You're flaunting her right here under my nose—just to humiliate me——"

"That's not true—I'm not at all. I'm my own master. You're becoming almost a—bore," and Larry started to turn away disgustedly.

CALLS FOR LURLINE

"Oh, yes?" Lurline cried furiously, as she started to restrain him. At that moment Lurline saw Blondie approaching. Suddenly she turned and ran back up the stairs.

"Lur-l-ine!" Blondie called, waving her hand and hurrying toward the stairs, while Larry watched her. Somebody nearby said "Quiet," and Blondie put her hand over her mouth.

"I'm sorry!" Blondie said as she came up to Larry. "What's the matter with Lurline?"

"Oh—nothing," Larry answered, smiling at her.

"I think I'd better get out of here. Did you see the dirty look she gave me?"

"Nonsense!" replied Larry, attempting to pass the matter off.

Blondie stood silently looking up the stairs for a moment, then said suddenly:

"I'm going up to see her. Think I could?" Without waiting for an answer she ran up the stairs. Larry stood watching as she entered the hallway leading to the dressing rooms.

* * *

As Lurline entered the dressing room she started tearing off her clothes, every moment showing the rage that was surging within her. As she reached her place at the long dressing table, the girl next to her said:

ENTERS DRESSING ROOM

"Sucker!"

"I know!" admitted Lurline, not looking at her.

"Listen, Duchess," said the girl, a cute little red head, as she reached for a ballet skirt on the back of her chair, "don't you know that in court circles, when another lady appears on the scene with that certain gent, we should never get cross and and never throw fits—just be terribly nice to the lady. You remember—" Red's advice was interrupted by Blondie putting her saucy head in through the open door. "Pardon me," Red continued, seeing Blondie, "here is the lady."

"Lottie," called Blondie as she spied Lurline at the table.

"Here I am—what do you want, Blondie?"

Blondie hurried over to Lurline, took a quick look at the girls nearby busily working over makeup and costumes, then said to Lurline in a confidential undertone:

"Larry talked to Ziegfeld and I've got a chance to get in this show . . . ."

"You mean Mr. Belmont spoke to Mr. Ziegfeld?" Lurline interrupted.

"I owe it all to you—are you sore?"

"No, I'm not your guardian."

"No—you're my pal though."

Lurline did not answer. Blondie looked at her anxiously, and asked:

"Aren't we pals any more?"

"Oh—yes-yes-yes." Lurline put on her grandest annoyed manner.

"You've changed—and you were great to me today." Blondie now noticed the looks she was getting from the other girls nearby, and fought desperately to keep back the tears. So long, mug! I'm sorry I came," and she moved off toward the door.

LURLINE APOLOGIZES

Lurline looked up quickly, a flash of the old time love for Blondie crossing her face. She was plainly perplexed and undecided just what to do.

In an undertone Red decided it for her. "Ni-ce to the lady!" she exclaimed.

"Blondie!" Lurline called out instantly. She arose hurriedly and went to Blondie. "Don't think that I meant to stand in your way, Blondie," she said gently.

"Would you care if I got in here? I'd love it, Lottie."

"Lur-l-ine," and the Follies girl looked around hastily to see if any had heard.

"Sorry, Lurline . . . I'm not as beautiful as you, but . . . You're not sore then?"

"Nonsense!" said Lurline, most friendly now, and taking Blondie's arm, "have a drink!"

"Sure, agreed Blondie, as they reached the dressing table. "I had some tonight with Larry."

Synopsis

Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan, friends since childhood, work in the same store. After work one evening, Lottie says she has a date and asks Blondie to join her. Blondie disapproves. Two men wait for them outside the building. When one becomes too familiar with her, Blondie slaps his face and goes home alone, to the poor section of the city. Later the two girls argue about the date and it ends in a rough and tumble fight. Blondie's dress is torn and she decides to get a new one. Looking for some money she had saved, she discovers that somebody has taken it. She greets her ailing dad when he arrives home and learns that he has lost his job. Lottie leaves home in quest of a career. After a few months, under the name of Lurline Cavendish, she becomes the newest sensation of the Follies. She visits the McClunes, but is anxious to get away from the place she once called her home. Blondie is self-conscious when she meets Larry Belmont, a young broker. Lurline becomes angry with Blondie for accepting a theater invitation from Larry. Blondie, through Larry's influence, is given a part in the Follies.

Now Go On

Blondie accepted the proffered glass and raised it high above her head.

"Heigh! Heigh! everybody, I'm crazy about all this," she said. As the girls in the room turned toward her, Blondie downed the drink in big, uninterrupted swallows.

Blondie leaned over Lurline and said quietly:

"You'll show me the ropes, won't you, Lottie? . . . You're a pal . . ." and Blondie spontaneously kissed her.

CONCEALS ANGER

"Careful!" quickly cautioned Lurline.

"Can I have some of this doodda?" asked Blondie, reaching for a lipstick. Without waiting for an answer, she applied it generously to her lips, stooping to see in the mirror.

"Look—I'm Mae Murray again," said Blondie, laughingly, as she struck a pose, head high in the air. Then smiling broadly to Lurline:

"So long! I'm going to see you after . . ."

"Who said so?" Lurline shot at her.

"Larry! Didn't he ask you out with us? If he didn't, I'll make him—he's nice. He does anything I say."

"I have another engagement," said Lurline shortly, leaning over and fumbling with a shoe to cover her anger.

"Too bad!" replied Blondie, apparently unconcerned. "I wish you could join us." And addressing the room generally, "So long, everybody. How'm I doin', kiddies?" And Blondie hurried for the door.

Lurline started to fly up again, when the girl next to her put out a restraining hand.

INVITING PLACE

"That's right—give her her head—you did the right thing!" she said. But Lurline was not to be so easily appeased.

"I'd rather have him out with a friend of mine than some of YOU double-crossers," Lurline said sarcastically.

"Says you!" smirked Red.

"Listen! Listen!" chirped up an Oriental dancer.

"Razzberry!" chimed in a third girl.

Lurline lapsed into silence. She knew better than to buck this gang in a general discussion of such a well-known Follies subject as Larry Belmont.

* * *

For more than an hour Blondie and Larry had been sitting at a gay little table in one of the most exclusive and modern speakeasies in town. When Blondie had met Larry on the stage, after she had visited Lurline in the dressing room, Larry said he was going to keep his promise, and take her to the best speakeasy that had evaded the raiding officers.

Implicitly Blondie followed Larry from the theater until they arrived at an imposing door. They were ushered into a smart, startlingly modern room, and Blondie gasped.

A beautiful bar at one end of the room, a glistening dance floor, an orchestra in evening dress, soft colors throughout the room bathed in the mellowest of lights, made the place inviting and to Blondie, pleasingly fantastic.

The cafe was almost deserted, except for the soft-moving, courteous waiters. Larry explained that the place was patronized mainly by the theater crowd.

Now Blondie sat across from Larry, thoroughly enjoying the relaxation after a long, hectic evening. She slowly sipped her wine, as she chatted gayly with her companion, and seized the opportunity of their being alone to study him. The result of her observations and conversation with the young giant of Wall street was most pleasant. She was beginning to thoroughly like this young man who could be so interested in a nice way and so courteous.

Slowly at first, and then as though a sudden flood of humanity had been unloosed from nowhere, the room began to fill with couples and parties—gay, laughing, noisy. The orchestra livened up, playing popular and rhythmic numbers. As Blondie caught the mood of the evening she became aware of the exhilarating effect of the wine she had been drinking. As she drained her glass, Larry smiled at her and said:

"Another cold bottle!" Almost instantly there was a waiter at his side taking the order. "Will you dance now?" Larry asked.

Blondie looked at him seriously; then her face broke into a broad smile, and she let herself enter into the spirit of the occasion.

BLONDIE IS HAPPY

"Heigh! Heigh!" she cried, getting to her feet jubilantly and settling comfortably into Larry's arms. The music was entrancing, and they danced in silence enjoying to the utmost the mating steps.

Back at their table the waiter was pouring the champagne. Larry looked at her closely.

"Happy?"

"Tightie!"

"And happy?"

"Scares me . . . I'm so happy," said Blondie sincerely.

"We've just started."

"Wait 'till I tell the folks!" Blondie said, smiling a little reminiscently.

"About me?"

". . . and everything. They won't believe me . . . sounds like Cinderella."

"Lose your slipper and I'd follow that little foot . . ."

"Gee you're fresh—I like you," she admitted.

"You're sweet—everybody tells you that?" Larry asked.

"He does!"

"Who?" Larry said sharply. Blondie looked at him quickly, caught the questioning look in his eyes, and purposely delayed her answer.

"Pa!" she exclaimed, smiling. Larry looked relieved, but before he could answer, Blondie said:

DOUBLE MEANING

"Oh, you'll be crazy about him. . . . . Say, do you know that I'm going to buy him for his birthday? . . . One of those swell overcoats with a near mink collar!" Blondie was enthusiastic and excited now. "Do they make a lot of money in the Follies?" she asked.

"Some do."

"Maybe I will."

"I hope not."

"That's not fair," said Blondie, failing to get his double meaning.

"Fairer than you think," replied Larry. Then suddenly, "Dance?"

"Heigh! Heigh!" said Blondie, and they were off on another whirl of the floor.

Throughout the evening Blondie and Larry danced and drank, chatted gaily, then drank and danced some more. They were so thoroughly interested in each other they failed to notice the speakeasy was almost empty. Not until the waiter presented Larry with the bill, apologizing for the fact that they were closing, did Blondie even think of the time. And even then she gave it but scant attention, being too busily engaged trying to get into her jacket. Somebody must have sewed up the sleeves . . . oh, no! . . . just tighty . . . Heigh! . . . Heigh!

As they weavingly reached the door and threw it open, Blondie screamed:

"Daylight!" Why it couldn't be possible, she thought, as Larry laughed heartily. Where had the time gone?

As they reached the street, Larry awakened the chauffeur asleep in Larry's big roadster. As the bewildered man came to attention, Larry said:

START FOR HOME

"Go home and get some beauty sleep." Then turning to Blondie: "We'll ride in front . . . you won't be so cold."

Blondie got in beside Larry, snuggled up in her coat, and said:

"S'nice warm coat."

"S'nice warm fellow," Larry replied.

"Heigh! Heigh!" . . . what time is it?" But before Larry could answer, Blondie started singing.

"It's far too early in the morning . . ." and Larry interrupted himself by stepping on the throttle, his voice lost in the roar as the car shot away from the curb.

Larry had not driven a mile through the deserted streets before Blondie's voice died away and she affectionately snuggled up against his shoulder, fast asleep.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Ronald Carries on With His Scheme

Ronald's eyes were suddenly aflame as I told him that Marion was "sitting up and taking notice" of his apparent defection. But the light died out as quickly, while his mouth was suddenly stubborn and his voice equally obstinate.

"I don't want any 'game in my own hands,'" he repeated dully. "I'll go through with this because you have told me it is the only way to save her from that—that—"

He paused, evidently remembering that he was speaking of the man whom from his babyhood he had been taught to regard as an uncle, and I promptly saved him the necessity of further speech.

"Yes, it is the only way, and I'm immensely grateful to you. The rest doesn't matter now. You can decide that later. Ah! Hank, thank you so much!"

ADJUSTS SCARF

Dicky's nephew was breathless as he held out to me the scarf for which I had sent him.

"Aw! gee! that's nothing," he said, his head cocked toward the phonograph. A beatific smile came over his face as he realized that he had returned in time, that the record was not yet over, and that he had the chance of the next dance with Carolyn. I took the scarf from him, and adjusted it ostentatiously, for I wished to make sure that Marion had full opportunity to see the action and conjecture that I had been talking to Ronald only because I was waiting for the scarf. I knew her quickness of perception, direct inheritance from her mother, and feared that she might see through the little comedy we were staging.

I could have saved the qualms that accompanied me as I went back to Lillian and Mary after nodding carelessly to Ronald. Marion's perceptions were quick, but they made her jump to the wrong conclusion. When I next turned my head, the two were dancing together, but Marion's face held a distinct frown, and as they danced past us, I heard her say pettishly:

"You can't fool me! I know, Auntie Madge told you to dance this with me, I saw her."

"Don't be silly!" Ronald answered weakly.

"I'm not silly, and I have my eyesight, too. And if you think I'm going to have my dances arranged for like some blind date, you've got another think coming. I couldn't get out of dancing this with you without being rude, but don't you ask me to dance another on the say so of some kind and anxious relative."

"At least she doesn't suspect my part behind the scenes," I said.

"She's too hot and bothered about it all to suspect anybody just now," Mary said sapiently. "And by the time I get through, she'll be centering all the suspicion on me."

She smiled impishly at Bob and danced away with him.

"I wonder what Noel's part is going to be in all this," Lillian said. "He's promised to 'understand' and not to interfere, but—do you notice he hasn't come out of that alcove since Mary told him about the scheme?"

"I don't think he'll be very much in evidence while the curtain's up on the act," I replied.

AN ADMIRING GLANCE

We looked across the dancing floor to where Ronald and Marion were dancing near Mary and Bob Trevellan—I guessed by Mary's shrewd maneuvering. Mary and Ronald were exchanging laughing raillery over the shoulders of the others, and when they danced away from each other, Ronald sent a frankly admiring glance at Mary, and then said something to Marion that made her throw up her head instinctively. A second later, her laugh and an apparent enthusiastic "Yes, isn't she?" reached us from across the room.

"She's decidedly fussed," her mother said sagely, "or we never would have heard that laugh and words over here."

"I know," I returned, remembering how much of a fetich the girls of Whitney Hall made of possessing low, well-bred voices. "He probably has just made some admiring comment upon Mary."

"For which you primed him just now," Lillian said shrewdly. "What's the next move."

"He going to ask Mary to dance—and keep on asking her," I returned, just as Katie appeared in the doorway, and held up a signaling hand to us.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Manager John Morin, Jr., of the Plaza Theater, where the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club meets every Saturday afternoon, organized a Cowboy Band last week, which entertained the members for the first time Saturday. They caught the fancy of the youngsters from the first number and for a time it looked as though the rest of the program would have to be sidetracked, but after taking four curtain calls, each time playing a different number, "Johnny" told the members that the band would be with the club every meeting from now on. Then the members let the rest of the show go on.

This band in their cowboy uniforms consists of Ross Scalise, banjo; Sam Curtola, guitar; Jim Scalise, harmonica; Mike Gliotti, violin.

MEMBERS ENTERTAINED

Members of the Cameraphone chapter were entertained by the following youngsters:

Doris Martin.....Toe dance
Lea Smith.....Acrobatic dance
Virginia Plumbo.....Tap dance
Genevieve Eberly.....Tap dance
Lea Smith .....Ballet
Ruth Eberely and Jean Langer
..... Song and tap dance
Henry La Pertche.....
.....Master of ceremonies

Following this Manager Earl Roeser held a dog show, in which 10 of the members competed with their dogs. The best dog, as selected by Mr. Roeser, was Jackie Smith's Scotch collie pup, and for this Jackie received two passes for the Cameraphone.

UNIQUE CONTEST

Manager Earl Roeser has a unique idea for a contest. Next Saturday every member of the club attending the Cameraphone meeting will be treated to a big slice of watermelon and an ice cream cone. Then comes the unique stunt. After each youngster has been given his allotment to eat, there will be staged a contest to see how much more ice cream and watermelon the boys and girls can get away with.

Komic Club members are all excited about "Lucky Buck" day at Kennywood Park, and it was the topic of conversation among both the boys and girls at Saturday's meetings. The Komic Club will be strongly represented at this picnic, according to the enthusiasm the idea has already created.

'LUCKY BUCKS' PICNIC

"Lucky Bucks," you know, will be as good as real money at Kennywood, Friday, August 26. The regular "Lucky Bucks" in the comic weekly of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph and special "Lucky Bucks" now being printed in the daily Sun-Telegraph will give all the youngsters a real "bankroll," which they can spend at the big picnic. If you want a ride on the Racer, the Jackrabbit, the Miniature Railroad, the Chair-o-Plane, or any one of a dozen rides and amusement devices, all you have to do is to peel off 10 "Lucky Bucks" from your bankroll and buy a ticket just as if you had the real money.

Congratulations to the following boys and girls all members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club who are celebrating their birthdays today:

Enright—Fleming Roseler.
Plaza—William Robson, Hugh Sweeney, John Ventorf.
Rowland—Billy Solea, Evelyn Foster, Betty Palmer.
South Hills—George Dulabon, Billy Nelson.

Disgraceful Selfishness

The Mayor and Council Have Forfeited Respect By Their Failure to Reduce Their Own Salaries.

To relieve the city's financial distress the Mayor and Council have discharged many employes and in one way or other have reduced the salaries of those remaining on the payroll.

Their own salaries they have not reduced.

The citizens have waited patiently for months to see if the municipal administrators would persist in their selfish attitude. They apparently intend to do so.

Not so much because of the money involved, though it would relieve the wants of many a needy family, as because of the principle of the thing, the refusal of the Mayor and Council to give up even a small part of their own high salaries is disgraceful.

The public feeling in regard to the matter is one of half-amused, half-contemptuous scorn.

It may become flaming indignation.

A School Inventory

Pennsylvania Is Indebted to the Volunteer Workers Who Are Studying Our Educational Problems.

It is refreshing to learn of the fine service that is being rendered the state by the volunteer workers who are studying our educational problems under the direction of Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction.

More than 200 Pennsylvanians are engaged in this work, which they are doing for no other reason than because they love Pennsylvania and desire to improve its schools. They are divided into 59 sub-committees and are conducting what is declared by Dr. Rule to be the most detailed educational inventory ever made in Pennsylvania.

Increased efficiency and economy in public school administration can be expected confidently as the fruits of their labors.

Not to Be Hushed Up

The Charge That Public Utilities Officials Extended Improper Favors Must Not Be Ignored.

W. D. B. Ainey, who resigned as chairman of the Public Service Commission last week after Gov. Pinchot had charged that he received large sums of money from public utilities officials, is an old man and suffering from what seems liable to prove a fatal illness.

The public can understand and sympathize with the Senate's obvious desire not to prosecute him.

It cannot sympathize with the Senate's obvious desire to hush the whole matter up and say no more about it.

This must not be permitted to become a closed incident until inquiry has been made if other members of the Public Service Commission were also the recipients of favors from public utilities companies.

It must not be permitted to become a closed incident until the guilt or innocence of those accused of giving the bribes has been determined and appropriate action taken.

A scandal of this magnitude is not to be ignored as the Senate seems disposed to ignore it, even if an investigation should prove embarrassing to the state Republican organization.

If there are any real patriots in the Senate they will insist on an exhaustive inquiry into the whole public utility situation, with particular reference to the question if the public utilities companies have succeeded in imposing unfair rates on the people of Pennsylvania by bribing the Public Service Commission.

State Parks as Gifts

The Greater Pennsylvania Council Calls Attention to a Commendable Philanthropy.

In its preliminary survey of the state's recreation resources the Greater Pennsylvania Council has found that about 5,550 acres of the state park land were gifts to the commonwealth from individuals, estates or corporations.

These gifts are a commendable philanthropy. There is need of more of them.

Privately owned forest land, suitable for picnics and outings, is being barred to the public in steadily increasing degree. As the "No Trespassing" signs go up, it is desirable that the area of state park land shall be extended to take care of the motorists and others who desire to rest and play for a few hours in the woods.

Pennsylvanians have not been so generous as New Yorkers in their gifts of land for state park purposes. New York has acquired by donation an average of more than five acres for each 1,000 of inhabitants, as against Pennsylvania's three-fifths of an acre.

Coal companies, as Charles Reitell, director of the council, suggests, might well turn over to the state, for conversion into parks, tracts of land for which they have no further need.

Expectations Surpassed

The County Audit, By Revealing Crookedness and Waste, Has Proved a Good Investment.

There was strong suspicion that an audit of the county's affairs would uncover thieving, and that was one reason why the people turned the Republican machine out and put independents in power in the County Commissioners' office.

But there was no expectation that an audit would accomplish all the things that M. C. Conick reported in a summary of what has so far been done.

Thieving has been uncovered, plenty of it. But the audit has done much more than furnish evidence for the grand jury. It has brought to light collectible accounts of hundreds of thousands of dollars owing to the county by municipalities, public utilities and other concerns. The debtors had not been pressed for payment by the former administration.

The audit has also indicated improvements and changes of method that can be effected with benefit in the administration of various county offices, notably those of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes and the Delinquent Tax Collector.

The audit has been a good investment for the taxpayers. It has more than paid for itself.

In his pitiless eyes of gray,
He is bent on cutting expenses down
In an economical way.

On every desk is a pair of feet
Owned by a henchman fat

And a fatherly sort of joy,
But he turns at last with a righteous scowl
And fires the office boy.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"The Forgotten Husband"

"The Forgotten Man," says one who signs himself "Mere Husband," is the one who pays the rent, settles the garage bills, brings home the bacon and mows the lawn, while Mother is at the bridge club and the children are using the car and burning up the roads."

* * *

Just when, how and why the average American Husband came to be "the Forgotten Man" in his own household is a mystery. But there is no doubt that, during the "whoopee decade," when the money was rolling in, and everybody was stepping out, a lot of husbands and fathers WERE "forgotten."

Sometimes, it was because Father WANTED to be forgotten, and never came home, except to change from his golf knickers to his dinner coat. And sometimes, it was because he was so absorbed in making money, or so easy-going, or so dog-tired that he PERMITTED himself to be forgotten.

* * *

Mother and the girls had barely a speaking acquaintance with him—except on Christmas and when the bills fell due. Or when they needed pocket money. Next to last year's almanac or last week's newspaper, nothing is so easily forgotten as a debt—or a self-effacing husband!

* * *

But the whoopee decade is past. Other times, other manners! And, now, Supreme Court Justice A. Cotillo, of New York, throws a brand new light on the domestic situation, by his recent ruling that "the husband who permits his wife to work and shifts to her the responsibility of making provision for their needs, forfeits whatever control (over her) might doubtfully have been his by virtue of his masculinity."

I'll say, "DOUBTFULLY!" For, if any modern American husband ever had any control over his wife "by virtue of his masculinity," he has managed to keep it a dark secret.

* * *

His "control," if any, has always been by virtue of his POCKET-BOOK! And now, with the entrance of the working-wife, he is facing the loss of that.

* * *

Who is it that has the last word in every decision in any big business enterprise? The man who is putting up the money! Then, isn't it a little ridiculous for "the man who pays the rent, brings home the bacon and mows the lawn," to let the family ride all over him—and then go about moaning that he is "the Forgotten Man?"

* * *

Justice Cotillo is right. The working-wife is entitled to a full-sized vote. But, any Good Provider, who brings home ALL the bacon and hands out the pocket-money, yet is too lazy or too indifferent or too soft-hearted or soft-headed to exercise a controlling vote in the family, deserves to be "forgotten"—and usually IS!

* * *

The truth is that the average American Husband loves to spoil his women—and then go about bragging how The Little Woman "bosses" him!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Jerked out of sound slumber by the most horrible screams ever I heard. And a young typist, going to work, had been crushed by a lorry against the iron fence of the roadway mall. Nor did the ambulance arrive for 18 minutes, but I hear she will live.

Came a privately circulated, autographed volume from George Ade, of Langdon Smith's "Evolution," which I am mightily glad to own. Also a note from Winnie Sheehan, at his desk again in Hollywood, and chirpy. Dining with Ann and Henry Sell atop the Waldorf, and on to watch dancers in a hall in the Black Belt.

So, driving in the lucid moonlight with my wife to Chappaqua to see Chester Geppert Marsh, as talented a lady as I know from our town. And many there not seen in years—among them, Mrs. Rose Henking, Florence Kerr, John and Lulu Hayward and Margaret Ecker. And we reuned until after midnight, discussing the tweaks of time.

Chamberlain Dodds, the decorator, journeyed to a bull fight in San Sebastian recently. After seeing the first bull killed and three blinded nags of the picadors horribly gored, he left in a semi-swoon. Outside the arena, he waved to a fiacre, but before stepping in, leaned against the horse and in a wan whisper confided: "Old boy, if you know what's good for you, you'll get out of this town."

Among nondescript throngs around employment bulletins on Sixth avenue, street fakers find a fertile field hawking penny gimcracks. Anything to relieve monotony.

* * *

There is a tingle, too, for the night crowds watching the burly "rail devils" of the car tracks, repairers with black iron masks and horn-like hoods, graining the black of night with acetylene torches. They work in a sort of Mephistophelian grotto of spark showers, sudden shoots of flame and spirals of glow-worm green. Bare arms and chests are silvered in a blinding radiance, and the whole effect is spectral.

A morning paper recently carried this announcement: "Partnership of J. P. Morgan and Fred Seither, known as J. P. Morgan & Co., of 74-03 Rockaway boulevard, has been dissolved." Such name similarities frequently confuse. Thomas Edison, Jr., in early youth, once displeased his father by accepting a post with an electrical concern which exploited his name. There was a Henry Ford Automobile Company in Jersey City, the proprietor's real name being Henry Ford. His business was respectable and nothing could be done about it. The Tiffany jewelry firm secured an injunction against the Tiffany Film Company. The original Tiffany offered no remonstrance until the film company used a big diamond as a trade mark, sloganized thus: "The name stands for gems of the highest quality."

A cabal of celibaciana" concerns the young bachelor who returned to his penthouse the other midnight to find four dispossessed beauties, lounging about on various divans, reading. Not only that, they had outfitted themselves in his pajamas. And they left only when he gave each their rent money. New York!

Broadway's outstanding scholar is a perky midget—known as Maj. Doyle, profound student of the classics, a fellow of exuberant talk, and a shark at the cross word puzzle. He was once a cashier at Dinty Moore's.

* * *

Incidentally, "Malaria Lane," that flinty stretch of hard-boiled West Forty-seventh street between Broadway and Sixth avenue, is the Lilliputian Promenade. Usually a midget may be found there mincing along, lounging in a doorway, or puffing a fat cigar at the curb. A hotel in the area is their hangout.

That breweries are rosily encouraged in a hope for real beer is evidenced by three in Yorkville ordering mushroom beds removed. Deserted breweries, offering an ideal fungus for such culture, have been thick with mushrooms.

Most of us, straddling more than one epoch, delight in "remembering when." During indulgence of such memories today by a group of antiquarians, Lisle Bell popped in, wimpled his brow a whip-stitch, and quick as that, harked back to when people used to tie a string on the finger to remember instead of a rope around the neck to forget.

LISTEN, WORLD

-:- -:-

By Elsie Robinson

We're all trying to get away—trying to escape some unpleasant reality.

Trying to get away from some obvious danger like sickness or accident, unemployment, poverty. Trying to escape from intangible things, too. Irksome responsibility. Criticism. Competition. Monotonous routine. Hateful discipline. Hard work.

Animals hide in holes; but we cannot find safety that way, and so we invent other hide-outs from the pressure of life.

Drink and dope; they're obvious hide-outs for weak and hurt souls.

Sickness; that's a more subtle hide-out. Sometimes it is very hard to discover that sickness is a hide-out. The woman who has sick headaches. The man who has nervous indigestion.

Doesn't the woman really have headaches? Yes, she does. But nine times out of ten she has really wished them on herself to suit her own ends. Headaches are a grand hide-out if you want to escape housework, or to get your own way with a rebellious family. Many a husband has been held in line for a life-time by the "invalid wife" racket.

And that nervous indigestion which the office force knows so well? Was there ever a better alibi for secret anger and bewilderment?

Grief, too, can become a hide-out. That seems a cruel statement, doesn't it? Yet many a sorrowful soul makes grief a convenient escape from responsibility. Remorse. There's a form of grief that makes a perfect hide-out. Easy to keep yourself so busy regretting the things you did yesterday that you have no time to do new and better things today.

Day dreams—the perfect hide-out from every unpleasant condition. But they're quicksand.

Self-pity—you can excuse or escape anything if you wrap yourself around with self-pity. For there are always plenty of reasons to pity ourselves. Something or someone has done each one of us dirt, and we can spend a life time dwelling on the fact, if we wish.

Even the most excellent virtues may serve as hide-outs. There's thrift. How much stinginess it has excused. And caution. How much cowardice it has encouraged.

Righteousness. What a perfect way of getting snooty at the unrighteous.

Even cheerfulness is a hide-out, at times. Thousands of people won't admit there is any trouble, SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY ARE TOO DOGGONED COWARDLY OR SELFISH TO FACE IT. Personally, I always distrust a Pollyanna. Anyone who is persistently cheerful about our miserable status quo, is doing some dirty dodging somewhere.

Hundreds of hide-outs. Any fool can invent one, but only a fool will; for a hide-out buys you nothing. While you're hiding, all the glory and adventure of life go by. Better to get out and be hurt than buy comfort at such a price.

And yet, few of us know we're using hide-outs. The hider-out kids even himself.

Don't kid yourself! Examine each of your acts and attitudes. Why are you saying, or thinking or doing that thing? Is it an honest or a brave thing? Are you doing that, or believing that, because you want to face life—OR BECAUSE YOU WANT TO ESCAPE REALITY?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Much is written and said of those who have won fame and fortune on their own energy and initiative.

Favorable circumstances—"lucky breaks" (so-called)—spell success as often as otherwise.

A noted architect endeavored to get out of the employe class by landing the contract for a large structure.

Vainly he tried to confer with the man who awarded the contract.

He was at a railroad station and the man he desired to see had been disappointed regarding a reservation.

The young architect heard him debating with the reservation agent.

He offered to share his room with the man, who accepted it.

The contract was landed and the architect started on a successful career.

He got a lucky break, could deliver the goods, and did successfully.

Perhaps you are waiting for a "lucky break."

Suppose you should get it—could you make good?

Are you waiting for an opening when you are not fully prepared for it?

The big chance would be worth nothing to you if your are not ready for it.

How well are YOU prepared for a big chance?

Sons of John Adams And Champ Clark

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Bennet Clark, the son of Champ, has written a biography of John Quincy Adams which ought to be, and undoubtedly will be, interesting. No man ever lived who was so petty in small things and at the same time so heroic in big things as the son of John Adams. It is not easy to think of his as a loving personality. He was selfish; he was venomous toward his rivals and political foes, and he did a most harmful thing when he kept a diary in which no man of his time, with Monroe alone excepted, came out without a lashing. It is easy to prove from this diary that almost every public man of his day was an ignoramus or a scalawag.

But like all the Adamses he was a lover of his country, and rather independent of party. In this connection we may illustrate both the pettiness and greatness of the man.

* * *

Old Hickory Fumed And Fussed

When Jackson entered upon his Presidency he found that preceding adminstrations had been unable to secure a settlement with France over the spoliation claims growing out of the Napoleonic war. He sent Rives, of Virginia, as Minister to France, with special instructions to get a settlement. The Virginian, grandfather, I think, of Amelia Rives, the novelist, had no great difficulty with the Ministry of Louis Phillipe, and a treaty was made.

Under the terms, the French were to pay what they owed, and we were to permit their wines to enter our ports duty free. The American Congress immediately passed the legislation to carry out our part of the agreement. But the French Parliament met and adjourned, time and again, without doing its part.

Old Hickory fumed and fussed. Then he sent Edward Livingston to Paris to force payment. He found that the trouble was that the Parliament did not like the King and preferred to embarrass him by making it appear that he had betrayed the interest of his country.

Lafayette, with whom Livingston was familiar, suggested that Jackson show his teeth; and Jackson sent a message to Congress which showed all his teeth.

At which France was outraged.

* * *

The French Fleet Sailed

Followed then some months of swashbuckling and sword rattling, with the French deputies protesting loudly against the "insult" to their country and warning of the "long sword of France." This was all for home consumption, but it had an ominous sound over here.

At length the quarrel became such that the French and American ministers were withdrawn and the diplomatic game was left in the hands of the charge d'affaires. Matters grew worse. It was rumored here that the French fleet had sailed under sealed orders for parts unknown. Everyone feared it was for American waters.

* * *

Jackson Won Out Without a War

Congress was then about to adjourn for nine months. War might be forced upon us anytime, for Jackson was not the man to back down. He thereupon asked Congress for an emergency appropriation of three millions to be used in case of necessity in strengthening our coast defenses.

This was added as an amendment to the Naval appropriation bill.

It passed the Democratic House and went to the Whig Senate where it was made the football of politics. Webster and Clay held forth at interminable length on the "indiscretions" of Jackson and the danger that he would force us into war. They talked so long that Congress ended constitutionally without a vote—on the amendment or on the main bill.

Thus, with war seeming almost certain, not a penny had been appropriated for the Navy.

That was the day Jackson ordered John Forsyth, his Secretary of State, to send something like an ultimatum to France.

Finally England offered mediation and Jackson won out without a war.

* * *

The Storm Howled

But the Whig politicians had outraged the nation by playing politics with an international crisis and almost leaving us at war without an appropriation for defense.

The storm howled.

The Whigs, especially Webster, were excoriated and became alarmed.

Webster spent the vacation preparing a sophisticated defense which he intended should put the blame on Jackson.

The Democrats were preparing to go after Webster when John Quincy Adams literally pushed them aside to assume the leadership in the defense of Jackson.

* * *

Adams Hated Jackson Personally

Now note the strange combination of pettiness and greatness in Adams. He had been defeated for re-election to the Presidency by Jackson. He hated Jackson personally. He left the White House before the inauguration, refusing the usual courtesies. He had not called at the White House once afterward. All of which was petty.

But in this controversy he saw only his country and its interests endangered by party—his own party. Jackson ceased to be the man and became, in Adams' mind, the head of the nation—his nation. And Adams took the floor in the House in a brilliant and spirited defense which was a devastating excoriation of Webster and the Whigs—his people.

In sheer eloquence and force, this speech has never been surpassed, but for some strange reason no reference is made to it anywhere, as far as I know, outside my own "Party Battles of the Jackson Period."

* * *

Why Is Clark Writing the Book!

And having risen to the heights, Adams, with victory his and Jackson's, resumed his petty personal attitude toward Jackson and continued, despite an invitation, to remain away from the White House.

I wonder what drew Bennet Clark toward John Quincy Adams. He must have stumbled onto something of this sort which aroused his curiosity. It is possible that his father was an admirer of the old fighting parliamentarian.

It is not remarkable that Bennet Clark, politician, possible Senator this year, should have decided to write a book. It is dollars to doughnuts that this was an ambition of Champ Clark all his life. He wrote but one—his reminiscence, which is a mine of history. This was at the close of his political career; his son is writing one at the beginning of his.

The Rhyming Optimist

BY ALINE MICHAELS

To B. H. T.

They can never be said, all the tender things
That are hidden away in my thoughts of you;
For your smile is the fount from which gladness springs,
And your look gives me courage and cheer anew.

Your hand is the one that has led me on
When I would have faltered and failed in my quest,
And your spirit has shown me the promise of dawn
While the shadows of night still about me pressed.

Oh, I had not a hope whose bright wings gleamed,
But that you gave those wings the sure strength to soar;
And there is not one dream that my soul has dreamed,
But that you were deep in the dream's hid core!

They can never be said; but you know them all,
The love and the faith that will never die,
Till the last sere leaves from the last trees fall,
And the light fades from the folded scroll of the sky.
